GLYNN ORDERED G. O. P. BOSSES TO AID SUFFRAGE

Republican Help to Women a Move in Whitman's Fight for Presidency.

PLAYS FOR THEIR SUPPORT

County Leader Here Is Ready to Favor a Dual Organization.

WOMEN IN CONGRESS FIGHT

Democratic Club Formed in Brooklyn—City Suffrage Party for Nonpartisanship.

Many of the Old Guard Republican bosses up-State, it was learned yesterday, worked assiduously and against heavy odds to obtain a majority in favor of the woman suffrage amendment to the State Constitution at the recent election. To their activity more than to any other single factor is ascribed the heavy vote cast for its ratification in the Republican strongholds up-State. They are determined that the newly enfranchised women shall be pawns in their own political game.

Orders sent out on the eve of election by Chairman George A. Glynn of the Republican State Committee stirred the Republican leaders up-State into unwonted zeal for the measure they had fought bitterly when it was before the voters for ratification two years ago. Chairman Glynn sent out a letter on the Saturday prior to election urging every Republican County Chairman up-State to do all in his power to get out a big vote for the amendment. While it was not explicitly stated, the up-State Republican politicians were not slow to read between the lines the inverse meaning of Chairman Glynn's communication. The result was that in districts where there was strong opposition to woman suffrage the vote, and consequently the adverse majority, was comparatively light.

Whitman Wants Aid of Women.

Chairman Glynn in sending out these instructions acted merely as the mouthpiece of Governor Whitman, who expects to be a candidate for renomination in the State primaries next Fall, and has awakened to a realization of the fact that he will have a fight on his hands. The Governor places in the woman vote his chief reliance for the third-term victory he is doubly anxious to obtain, because without it he could scarcely figure conspicuously as a candidate for the Presidential nomination in 1920, the goal which the Governor, with the aid of his friends, hopes to attain.

Governor Whitman has been as active an advocate of woman suffrage as his office would permit him to be. He supported the woman suffrage amendment in 1915 when it was before the voters for ratification. He spoke warmly in support of woman suffrage at the convention of the Woman Suffrage Party in Saratoga last September. Mrs. Whitman has been actively interested for years in the fight for woman suffrage.

One of the Old Guard Republican leaders up-State who has been closely allied with Governor Whitman politically, rebelled against Chairman Glynn's instructions. The anti-suffrage insurgent was George W. Aldridge of Monroe. His district returned an adverse majority of approximately 3,500. In Albany, where Governor Whitman's political foe, William Barnes, rules, the vote was two to one against woman suffrage.

Governor Whitman will leave nothing undone to bring about the enactment of legislation to provide for a special enrollment so that women may vote in the State primaries next Fall. Recommendations for the passage of such a bill, it has already been announced in dispatches from Albany, will be embodied in the Governor's annual message to the Legislature. While some of the anti-Whitman Republicans, of whom there are more in the Senate than in the Assembly, may offer opposition in order to eliminate the woman voters as a factor in the primaries and lessen the Governor's chances of success in his fight for a third term, the present outlook is distinctly favorable to the women. The Senators will be compelled to go back and face their constituents next Fall, and it is not likely that many of those looking for re-election will be prepared to brave the wrath of women with ballots.

To Name Republican Conferrees.

Samuel S. Koenig, Chairman of the New York County Republican Committee, said last night, that at the regular meeting of the County Committee on Thursday, a special committee would be appointed to confer with leaders of the woman suffrage organization to devise ways to enable the enfranchised women to participate in the management of the Republican county organization, should they so desire. In the meantime the standing Committee on Legislation of the County Committee will be set to work to draft the necessary legislation for a special enrollment of the woman voters, so that they may participate in the primary fight next Fall.

"It is for the women to determine whether they will work together with us or form a separate organization of their own," Chairman Koenig said. "We are ready and willing to co-operate in any manner that will suit the women."

Chairman Koenig said that he was quite willing to have the bylaws of the County Committee amended so as to provide for associate leadership in each of the twenty-three Assembly districts in Manhattan, the associate leader to be a woman with her own staff of lieutenants and election district workers of her own sex. The women may also, should

Tirpitz Loses Faith in U-Boats; Fears Plan to Devour Germany

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 12.—At a meeting of the new Fatherland Party in Munich yesterday, Admiral von Tirpitz, former German Minister of Marine, made a speech saying that it was a mistake to believe that the submarine would prove sufficient protection against Great Britain, as some effective counterweapon was bound to be discovered.

He also delivered a violent utterance on annexation, asserting that the question whether Germany or Great Britain became the protector of Belgium would be the decisive issue of the war.

"A mistaken solution of the Belgian question would stunt our exports and the reserve capital of our industry, and degrade us to being the bond slave of Anglo-Americanism," said the Admiral. "Our military security lies in Belgium. It is the only way of obtaining compensation for our enormous economic losses."

The Admiral said that Germany must have Antwerp, that Austria must become the principal protecting power of the mouth of the Danube, and that Germany was interested in the settlement of the Adriatic question.

"Germany's struggle," he added, "is a terrific battle against the all-devouring tyranny of Anglo-Americanism."

PLAN STRICTER BAN ON MUNITION PLANTS

Waterfront Fire Here May Lead to Revision of Rules for Permits.

DEMAND GREATER CAUTION

Government to Insist That Its Own Interests Are Above Those of Employers.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—The execution of the plan adopted by the Government almost from the beginning of the war to safeguard manufacturing plants engaged on war supplies is being questioned now by owners of warehouses and plants where fires and explosions have occurred under suspicious circumstances suggesting the activity of enemies. The permit system, it is urged, does not work, as plotters are still able to get employment where they can carry on their plans to the risk of large amounts of property and the hazard of human lives.

Government officials who are charged with the execution of the plan of granting permits complain that they have been made the target for blame by manufacturers on two counts. They have uniformly found the employers, they say, prone to plead for the retention of old enemy alien employes, and as an employer countersigns the permits obtained from the United States Marshal of the Judicial District where the plant is situated they say they have the right to retain such employes as they desire. For some reason, it was asserted, they have insisted that the special faithfulness of an employe should be considered, and have retained men who would otherwise have been kept out of war plants.

Many such enemy aliens have been in the employ of corporations or firms for years before the war in Europe. Employers cite such cases to back their contention that it would be a hardship to discharge such men, and they are usually emphatic in asking that they receive permits. When fires and explosions have occurred it was said manufacturers in several cases declared that the Government was lax in enforcing the permit plan and that had there been strict enforcement the trouble would not have occurred.

It is likely that in consequence of the New York waterfront fires there will be a more rigid inquiry into the antecedents and character of men vouched for by employers and that permits will not be so easily granted hereafter. The Government has proceeded, it was said, too much on the theory that the judgment of the employers in regard to their men could be relied on and that their own self-interest was sufficient to safeguard the industry. But officials now admit that this view is not conclusive of all contingencies and that a hard and fast exercise of caution is demanded. No new method of protecting munition plants will be employed, but there will be new regulations buttressing the administration of the existing method. The Government will insist on the view that its own interests are paramount and the necessity for the output of munition plants is so great that employers must bend to the rules to be laid down by the Government.

It was said to night that there has never been carried out in this country anything like the precautions taken in English and Canadian war plants. Their uniform practice has been to place barbed wire barriers around their works and employ large and competent forces of watchmen. All employes are subjected to the most rigid test of loyalty, and monitors are kept in the works during all working hours to note any suspicious conduct or any sign of defection that might give rise to trouble. The United States Government has no present intention of going as far as this, but the practical co-operation of employers will be expected, and there will be more thoroughly organized effort hereafter to protect munition manufacturing plants.

A Federal official, one of the highest in authority so far as the enforcement of the enemy alien regulations in New York City is concerned, said yesterday that a suggestion had been submitted to the Government in Washington which, if adopted, would reduce to a minimum the danger of incendiary fires in munition works, the attempted bombing of

CONTEMPT FOR PACIFISTS

Asserts Germany Started War and Aims to Control Industry of World by Force.

AMAZED AT BOLSHEVIKI

Compounding with Germany Will Mean Russia's Destruction —No Opposition to Gompers.

Special to The New York Times.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 12.—Addressing the annual convention of the Amaracin Federation of Labor here today, President Wilson delivered a message to the American people as well as to American labor, and, many here believe, to the peoples of the warring nations of Europe, particularly Germany, Austria-Hungary, and Russia.

He made it clear that he was against any premature peace with Germany. He had contempt, he said, for the pacifists.

"I want peace," he said, "but I know how to get it, and they do not."

He sent Colonel House abroad, he explained, to take part in a conference as to how the war was to be won.

"And he knows, as I know," he said, "that that is the way to get peace if you want it for more than a few minutes."

Mr. Wilson appealed to American labor for full co-operation for the winning of the war. Incidentally, he paid tribute to the patriotism of Samuel Gompers, President of the Federation, and, referring to the aid Mr. Gompers had given the Administration in its war program, said:

"I like to lay my mind alongside a mind that knows how to pull in harness. The horses that kick over the traces will have to be put in a corral."

The President's references to Mr. Gompers were loudly applauded.

No Signs of Any Revolt.

The rumored revolt of pacifists and Socialists against President Gompers is not going to take place. That is the impression left by the opening day of the convention, although the election of officers does not come till the very end of the convention, two weeks hence, and it is possible that the insurgents, if there are any, are merely biding their time.

But from present indications Mr. Gompers and those who are associated with him in support of the war are going to remain in the saddle. Everything worked for them today, and notably the speech of President Wilson, who made a hurried trip from Washington to address the convention. When the President said that while his heart sympathized with the feeling of the pacifists, his mind had a contempt for them, because, while he, too, wanted peace he knew how to get it and they did not, the whole audience stood up and cheered wildly. They cheered also his vigorous praise of Mr. Gompers as a man of "patriotic courage, large vision, and a statesmanlike sense of what is to be done." They applauded when the President made appeals for the co-operation of all classes, employers and employes alike, as an essential to winning the war.

Naturally, the delegates were not a little pleased when the President said, not once, but twice, that the attitude of labor in industrial disputes was more often reasonable than that of capitalists, and they received with every token of agreement his declaration that "nobody has a right to stop the processes of labor until all the methods of conciliation and settlement have been exhausted."

The President's address was admirably balanced to forestall every conceivable objection that labor might have to aiding in the energetic prosecution of the war. Beginning with a portrayal of the menace of a militaristic Germany to peaceable industry, commerce and labor in other countries, he expressed amazement at the "ill-informed" Russian Bolsheviki, who thought that liberal reforms could flourish under the shadow of the German might, passed with rather amused contempt by the "stupidity" of American pacifists, and led on to the declaration that the only way to give freedom a chance to live was by utilizing every possible energy of America in loyal and complete co-operation.

Radicals were conciliated by his warning that certain practices still indulged in by employers must be corrected, and by his outspoken denunciation of mob law, even when employed against "organizations whose object is anarchy and the destruction of law."

But this disapproval of mob violence on the I. W. W. led directly to a warning, gentle but obvious, against "manifestations of the unwillingness to co-operate" between labor and capital, which come very near to mob law.

Temper of the German People.

The President in that part of his address devoted to the broader phases of the world conflict declared his belief that, were it not for the Pan Germans, the spirit of freedom would find "as fine a welcome in the hearts of Germans as it can find in any other heart. Power," he said, "cannot be used with concentrated force against free peoples, if it is to be used by a free people."

Speaking, probably of Austria, Mr. Wilson referred to the intimations of

ITALIANS URGE US TO FIGHT AUSTRIA

Thus, They Say, America Can Render Them the Most Important Service.

COAL AND WHEAT NEXT

Need for Munitions Is Great, but Less Imperative Than for Food and Fuel.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 12.—In a previous dispatch I set forth the necessity for American aid to Italy and the principal reasons of the internal weakness in Italy that rendered that aid so imperative. I will now try to indicate how in the opinion of the best informed Italians America's aid can be exercised most usefully.

To begin with, it is moral even more than material help that Italy requires at this juncture. It has been the misfortune of the Entente leaders to have but insufficiently recognized the importance of the moral factors in this war of peoples. It is only recently that they are beginning to understand the vital necessity of informing public opinion and directing it along right lines.

As I showed yesterday, the greater part at least of Italy's present troubles is due to the demoralization of the masses by anti-Italian elements. Obviously, then, the first thing to do is to recreate and strengthen a healthy morale in Italy, and in this America can aid enormously.

A moment's thought will show that the return to Italy of hundreds of thousands of Italian emigrants in the United States, who made what for them are fortunes, must have created an almost fabulous belief in the strength, richness, and importance of America. America's voice would carry weight in Italy superior even to that of the Roman Catholic Church.

What Italy Most Needs.

What, then, is America to say? First and most important, in the opinion of Italians, America must declare her solidarity with Italian aims by declaring war on Austria. No one who has not been recently in Italy can realize the harm done by crafty propaganda whose theme is America's abstention from war with Austria—which, say the propagandists, proves the justness of the Vatican's pacifism by showing that America also is not in sympathy with the war Italy is waging to complete her national unity.

How far that unity is in line with the Vatican's dream of temporal power may be judged by the fact that its heart and centre is Rome—the city which, the Popes regard equally as the home pivot of their rule on earth. This question of Rome demarks immediately the vastness of the gulf between the Papal aspirations and those of Italy as a nation. For both parties Rome is a holy palladium whose possession guarantees and typifies everything they hold dear. Yet the Italian Government has in no way tried to hamper or interfere with the Vatican.

If the Vatican would confine its activities to spiritual affairs, no enlightened politician in Italy or France would have a word to say against it, but—and this is hard for American or Englishman to realize—the Roman Catholic Church in Continental Europe has always insisted and still insists on exerting political influence, which by the nature and traditions of the Vatican has always been absolutist and anti-democratic.

America's declaration of war on Austria and of complete solidarity with the Entente would take the strongest weapon from the hands of the anti-Italian elements in Italy. It is hard for Americans to realize the importance of this question.

To take a specific case: Cardinal Gasparri, at the time of the Pope's note and before the arrival of President Wilson's reply, gave an interview to a well known American journalist for publication in America. The whole tenor of the interview was an attempt to prove the exactitude with which the Papal views coincided with the statements and opinions of Wilson. The journalist in question was too well informed to be caught, and sacrificed a good "story" in the national interests.

When I add that the President's reply threw the Vatican literally into consternation it will be understood how fictitious was the parallel Gasparri tried to draw between the viewpoints of the Pope and our President.

This example may give an idea of what capital the Catholic Party can draw from America's failure to declare war on Austria.

Call for an American Mission.

The next most important aid. from the Italian standpoint, is that America should send to Italy an official mission, however small, of prominent men with the twofold obect of giving the Italian people concrete proof of American sympathy and of procuring for America a wider knowledge of the Italian situation. On similar lines the Italians ask that the press relations between the two countries should be strengthened, and that the leading American newspapers

News of Fierce Encounter at Gatchina Reaches Minister Morris.

RESULT NOT YET KNOWN

Compromise at Moscow Reported After Battle There with 700 Casualties.

FIGHTING IN PETROGRAD

Military Cadets Attack Bolsheviki with Armored Cars, but Are Overpowered.

Seek Compromise Between Kerensky and Bolsheviki

PETROGRAD, Nov. 12, (12:30 P. M.)—Petrograd is still in the hands of the Bolsheviki after desperate street battles on Sunday in which a handful of military cadets was exterminated or captured by members of the Balsheviki, upon whom they inflicted considerable losses.

The Committee of Public Safety agents have gone to Gatchina to try to arrange a compromise between the Kerensky forces and the Bolsheviki.

STOCKHOLM, Nov. 12.—A bloody encounter has taken place near Gatchina, thirty miles southwest of Petrograd, between soldiers from the front, headed by Premier Kerensky, and Bolsheviki forces from Petrograd, according to advices which have reached Ira Nelson Morris, the American Minister, from reliable sources.

The result of the battle was not reported to Mr. Morris.

It is reported that M. Kerensky is still issuing proclamations as Premier, and that strong forces are rallying against the Bolsheviki. General Kaledines, former Hetman of the Cossacks, has announced his refusal to recognize the Leninites, and Maxim Gorgy is issuing daily bulletins against them. The Committee of Public Safety, which was appointed by the Mayor and the City Duma, has obtained the support of the Mensheviki Social Revolutionists and the bourgeois parties generally, and is also receiving the support from the Railway Employes' Union and the Central Railway Committee.

Fleet Dissatisfied With Lenine.

The Committee of Public Safety sent an emissary to treat with the sailors of the fleet. He has reported that the sailors already are showing dissatisfaction with Lenine. The reports also say that the committee has issued an appeal to the city population and to the city militia to abstain from violence against the Bolsheviki, who have the support of the sailors and 50,000 soldiers of the Petrograd garrison, and to await a peaceful solution of the situation.

All the Ministers of the provisional Government who were arrested at the commencement of the revolt have been released, except Foreign Minister Terestchenko and one other. The banks in Petrograd are still closed, but the shops are open.

The Bolsheviki's short day of triumph is rapidly nearing its close, in the opinion of M. Goulkevitch, the Russian Minister to Sweden, who bases his belief on information received from various sources during the last twenty-four hours. M. Goulkevitch, who was greatly depressed when The Associated Press correspondent first saw him immediately after Nikolai Lenine's coup, was beaming with optisim today.

"Everything is coming out all right," he said. "There no longer is any reason to worry over the situation. All the information that has reached me since Saturday shows that the crisis has virtually passed, and that it will be only a short time until the Bolsheviki will have played out their brief rôle.

"This thing had to come some time, and I believe it is well it came when it did. It was a state of sickness which could not be avoided, and convalescence will be rapid."

The correspondent referred to the fact that the Russian Ambassador to the United States had given formal notice of his refusal to recognize the Lenine Government, and asked M. Goulkevitch whether he had done the same.

"I have made it clear from the first day," the Minister replied, "that there could be no question of recognizing the Leninites, but I gave no formal notice to that effect. The whole thing is so absurd and even laughable that I considered it unnecessary formally to give notice of anything so obvious as my refusal to recognize the Bolsheviki."

LONDON, Tuesday, Nov. 13.—The Daily Mail's Petrograd correspondent, telegraphing at noon Monday, says reports from Moscow are contradictory, but that it seems probable order has been restored there, though conditions are uncertain. He adds that news from

War Will Be Shortened by Solidified Allied Action Insists British Premier; Confident of Final Triumph

From Lloyd George's Speech in Paris Yesterday.

I have spoken today with a frankness that is perhaps brutal, a the risk of being ill understood here and elsewhere, and not, perhaps, without risk of giving temporary encouragement to the enemy, because now that we have established this council it is for us to see that the unity it represents be a fact and not an appearance.

The war has been prolonged by particularism. It will be shortened by solidarity. If the effort to organize our united action becomes a reality, I have no doubt as to the issue of the war. The weight of men and material and of moral factors in every sense of the word is on our side. I say it, no matter what may happen to Russia or in Russia. A revolutionary Russia can never be anything but a menace to Hohenzollernism. But even if we are obliged to despair of Russia, my faith in the final triumph of the cause of the Allies remains unshakable.

TEUTONS CAPTURE 14,000 ITALIANS

Cut Off Retreating Forces in the Upper Piave and Cordevole Valleys.

ADVANCE DOWN THE PIAVE

Are Now Before Feltre, 17 Miles Below Belluno—Checked Elsewhere on River.

BERLIN, Nov. 12, (via London.)—The Austro-German forces in Northern Italy have cut off and captured 14,000 Italian troops—10,000 in the Upper Piave Valley and 4,000 in the Cordèvole Valley—according to War Office reports.

The German afternoon statement also says that the invading forces have advanced from Belluno down the Piave and are in front of Feltre.

The text of the afternoon report reads:

The energetic collaboration of Württemberg and Austro-Hungarian mountain troops, near Longarone, barred the way of the enemy retreating in the upper Piave Valley. Ten thousand Italians were compelled to surrender, and numerous guns, material, and war stores were captured.

Our troops, who pressed forward from Belluno down the Piave, are before Feltre.

On the lower Piave there was nothing new to report.

The supplementary report from General Headquarters issued tonight says:

In Cordèvole Valley, west of Belluno, 4,000 Italian prisoners were taken.

Italians Fighting on Northern Front.

ROME, Nov. 12.—The Italians have resisted the enemy everywhere on the northern front, along which the Austrians are attempting to outflank the Italian river line, the War Office reports. On the plain there is brisk firing across the Piave River.

An enemy action on the Asiago plateau, on the Trentino front, was a complete failure.

The text of the official statement follows:

From the Stelvio Pass to the Astico River there was no notable event yesterday. On the Asiago Plateau the enemy renewed yesterday afternoon his attack on our lines in the sector of Gallio, Monte Longara, Hill 1674 and Meletta di Gallio. The enemy actions failed completely under our artillery and rifle fire. On the extreme northern part of the front of the attack, where a bitter infantry struggle took place, our men counterattacked and succeeded in capturing some prisoners. On the remainder of the mountainous front, during contact engagements with the enemy vanguards, our advanced troops resisted everywhere.

On the plain across the Piave River brisk firing is reported.

Feltre is a town of about 4,600 inhabitants on a height near the Piave, seventeen miles southwest of Belluno. The town is situated about ten miles north of the Venetian plains. The military operations reported by the Germans in the mountainous region of Feltre have no direct bearing on the Italian line on the lower Piave.

Piave Defense Is Successful.

ITALIAN HEADQUARTERS IN NORTHERN ITALY, Nov. 12.—The Italians are holding the Austro-German advance on the Piave line. Early reports from the front today were favorable.

Heavy shelling is in progress all along the new front.

The Italians are intrenched back of the west bank of the Piave River, and the Austro-German main force is now taking the place of the advanced guard on the east bank. The strip of water between the opposing lines is about half a mile, widening at some points to a mile.

An observer just back from a tour along the line told the correspondent that the cannonade had become continuous. The Austrians are using five-inch guns, not yet having brought up many of their heaviest pieces. The enemy is turning his fire against the high campanile (bell towers) of small villages fringing the western bank, to prevent

ROME, Nov. 11.—The greatest battle of history, with more men engaged, and possessing for the world large significance, is preparing in Italy. The Germans, on their side, are pressing the advantage gained by their successes, hoping to keep the Italians demoralized and prevent the recovery of equilibrium while the Italians, reinforced by the French and British, and aided by leaders accustomed to cope with Hun ingenuity and prowess, are seeking to organize resistance at a place and under conditions as favorable as possible.

In point of mere numbers the advantage lies with the Allies, but the Italian Army has suffered a rout which has momentarily destroyed its integrity. The immediate problem of the allied strategists seems to be to maintain an ordered rearguard action, reorganize the scattered units, and stop the contagion of panic that seized on parts of the army, and there are doubtless huge other problems known only to the higher command involving resistance to the Germans in the Trentino and the Cadore.

Reckoning numbers solely, Italy still has 4,000,000 enlisted men, conceding the German claim of half a million killed, wounded, captured, and missing or dispersed, and therefore should meet the invader on better than equal terms. As against the Italian deterioration, Mackensen must suffer the same exhaustion and difficulty from lengthened communication that made von Kluck's defeat possible at the Marne.

It is in guns that the Allies seem weakest. The German drive has already cost them 2,200. But here again comfort may be drawn from the Marne parallel. In that battle the French were vastly inferior to the Germans in artillery. The German advance to the Channel was checked. The French Army did it practically with rifle and bayonet against an enemy intrenched in commanding positions and well supplied with artillery and machine guns.

To carry the parallel further, the same man who struck the blow at the Marne and who was the master strategist at Lorette is helping and planning for the battle of the Venetian plain. He is General Foch, the coolest, most accomplished and audacious strategist of this war.

Arrival of Allied Aid.

Still another encouraging feature is the wholehearted and swift action of France and England. Men and machinery are pouring into Italy in quantities that seemed impossible. I have seen many of the troop trains and the sight stirs one's enthusiasm. Finer soldiers never wore boots. As one said of the Anzacs: "They're in the pink of condition and don't give a damn for anybody."

In train after train of French soldiers every man looks like an Alpine chasseur. The spirit among them is extraordinary. They treat the expedition as a big lark and when a stop is made at a station they are as lively as fox terriers.

The men seem delighted to leave the trenches and get into the open. As for Fritz and his gases and guns and propaganda and smart tricks generally, one bit afraid of him.

England and France appear to have put aside all narrow and petty considerations and to have given Italy of their very best. The handling of the transport has been a remarkable feat. Both French and Italians have perhaps they think they know him and are not formed miracles.

PREMIER RECALLS ERRORS

Serbian and Rumanian Disasters Due to Lack of Joint War Direction.

ITALY ENFORCED THE NEED

He Was Ready to Quit if the Allies Had Not Taken This Forward Step Now.

AMERICA TO PARTICIPATE

Russia Also, He Believes--Bonar Law Suggests War Council Will Be Only Advisory.

PARIS, Nov. 12.—At a luncheon given today by Premier Painlevé in honor of David Lloyd George, the British Prime Minister, the latter discussed the plan for centralized direction of the Allies' military efforts. He said in part:

"Unfortunately we did not have time to consult the United States or Russia before creating this council. The Italian disaster necessitated action without delay to repair it. This made it indispensable to commence right now with the powers whose forces may be employed on the Italian front. But, in order to assure the complete success of this great experiment, which I believe is essential to the victory of our cause, it will be necessary that all our great allies be represented in the deliberations. I am persuaded that we shall obtain the consent of these two great countries and their co-operation in the work of the inter-allied council."

Mr. Lloyd George talked of the reasons for not taking the step earlier. He referred to "timidities and susceptibilities" when it came to treating questions on any front not commanded by Generals taking part in the inter-allied consultations. The Allies had committed a great fault, he said, in not assisting Serbia adequately in holding her line. The result was that the Central empires broke the blockade and procured men and supplies from the East, without which Germany would have been unable to maintain the force of her armies.

Reason for Balkan Disasters.

"Why was this unbelievable fault committed?" asked the Premier. "The reply is simple. It was because no one in particular was charged with guarding the Balkan gate. The united front had not become a reality. France and England were absorbed by other problems in other regions. Italy thought only of the Carso. Russia was mounting guard over a frontier of a thousand miles, and, even without that, she could not have passed through to have helped Serbia, because Rumania was neutral.

"It is true that we sent troops to Saloniki to succor Serbia, but, as always, they were sent too late. Half the men who fell in the vain effort to pierce the Western front in September that same year would have saved Serbia, saved the Balkans and completed the blockade of Germany.

"You may say this is an old story. I grant you that it was simply the first chapter of a series that has continued to the present hour; 1915 was the year of the Serbian tragedy; 1916 was the year of the Rumanian tragedy, which was a repetition of the Serbian story almost without change. This is unbelievable, when you think of the consequences to the Allies' cause of the Rumanian defeat. Opulent wheatfields and rich petroleum wells passed to the enemy and Germany was able to escape us.

"Through the harvest of 1917 the siege of the Central Powers was raised once more, and the horrible war was once more prolonged. That would not have happened, had there existed some central authority, charged with meditating upon the problem of the war for the entire theatre of the war."

Was Ready to Drop Responsibility.

After reviewing the Italian campaign the Premier said:

"As far as I am concerned, I had arrived at the conclusion that if nothing was changed I could no longer accept the responsibility for the direction of a war condemned to disaster from lack of unity. Italy's misfortune may still save the alliance, because without it I do not think that even today we would have created a veritable superior council.

"National and professional traditions, questions of prestige and susceptibilities all conspired to render our best decisions vain. No one in particular bore the blame. The guilt was in the natural difficulty of obtaining of so many nations, of so many independent organizations that they should amalgamate all their individual particularities to act together as if they were but one people."

Mr. Lloyd George said later:

"I have spoken today with a frankness that is perhaps brutal. At the risk of being ill understood here and elsewhere, and not, perhaps, without risk of giving a temporary encouragement to the enemy, because now that we have established this council it is for us to see that the unity it represents be a fact and not an appearance.

"The war has been prolonged by particularism. It will be shortened by solidarity. If the effort to organize our united action becomes a realty, a have no doubt as to the issue of the war. The weight of men and material and of moral factors in every sense of the word is on our side. I say it, no matter what may happen to Russia or in Russia. A revolutionary Russia can never be anything but a menace to Hohenzollernism.

"But even if we are obliged to despair of Russia, my faith in the final triumph of the cause of the Allies remains unshakable."

Premier Painlevé in his speech at the luncheon remarked:

"A single front, a single army, a single nation—that is the program requisite for future victory. If after forty months of war, after all the lessons the war has taught us, the Allies were not capable of that sacred international union, then, in spite of their sacrifices, they would not be worthy of victory."

In discussing the manner of accomplishment of this fusion, M. Painlevé said:

"The enemies' alliance realized unity of effort by brutal discipline, one of the peoples among them having mastered the others and rendered them serviceable. But we are free peoples. We do not admit of subjection to other peoples in time of war. That independence is at the same time a source of strength and weakness—of strength because there is a capacity for resistance which is unknown to subject peoples, and of weakness because it renders more difficult co-ordination of military operations. To reconcile this independence with the need for unity of direction which is required to achieve an efficacious war policy will be the work of the Interallied War Committee or of the Superior War Council just created by the Allies."

President Poincaré today received the new Italian Ambassador, Count Bonin-Longare. The President referred to the invasion of Italian territory over which he had traveled recently with the King of Italy, and added:

"Yes, as was said by King Victor Emmauel in his noble proclamation, any weakness today would be treason. Treason also would be all internal discord and treason would be all discord between the Allies."

Only Advisory, Says Bonar Law.

LONDON, Nov. 12.—Andrew Bonar Law, Chancellor of the Exchequer, stated in the House of Commons today that it was hoped that the United States would participate in the deliberations of the Interallied War Council, which would meet at Versailles once a month or oftener with a view to better co-ordination of military action. The adhesion of other allies to the War Council, Mr. Bonar Law said, was under discussion.

Each power was to appoint a permanent military representative as adviser to the War Council, and these would be independent of the General Staffs of their countries. They would not have an active function, but advisory on all questions affecting co-operation in the allied strategy. The General Staff and military commanders of the armies of each power would be charged with the conduct of military operations and remain responsible to their respective Governments. The military representatives and their staffs would be in permanent session at Versailles.

Mr. Bonar Law confirmed the report that Major Gen. Sir Henry Wilson would represent England and General Foch France, but said that he could not give the name of the Italian representative.

Bonar Law's profession of ignorance as to the Italian representative on the Allied War Council suggests that the reported inclusion of Cadorna is not official.

MERRY WAR IS STARTED OVER NEW WAR COUNCIL

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 12.—The conflict of opinion here between the "western fronters" and the "single fronters" in relation to conduct of the war has not yet developed into open hostilities, but there are ample indications that the "western fronters" are not going to accept the doctrine implied by the decisions of the Rapallo Conference without demur.

The Times and The Daily Chronicle today publish editorials, which criticises as strongly as the restraints of patriotism permit, both the constitution and the composition of "the permanent Central Military Committee," which is to have its permanent home in Versailles. Questions are raised as to what are to be the powers and responsibilities of the three Generals nominated, and what will be their positions relative, say, to General Diaz and General Sir William Robertson. Both Foch and Cadorna have occupied the post of Chief of Staff in their respective armies, but in the case of General Wilson, it is pointed out that he was not at the time of his appointment even attached to the British Imperial General Staff.

Premier Painlevé's statement to the French Chamber of Deputies and the explanations which Premier Lloyd George is expected to make on his return here are awaited with keenest interest by all who are aware of the deep-lying differences between the two schools of thought.

Meanwhile, it is suggested that the functions of the Permanent Military Committee will be ambassadorial and that they will be, in effect, liaison officers of the highest rank, with an unusual degree of discretionary authority. The Chronicle makes this suggestion, which in some quarters is interpreted as a possible method of compromise or means of reconciling the two schools of strategy.

The Times apparently is unwilling to admit the desirability of such a compromise. It thinks that "the utmost vigilance will be required if the war council of the Allies, which has entered on a new phase with the Rapallo conference, is to be allowed to fulfill its proper function."

As The Times ambiguously phrases it, "the risk at the moment is that the war council of the Allies is regarded by certain amateur strategists as an opportunity for disparaging all that the Allies have achieved in the past."

The Times goes on to refer to "suggestions that Generals Foch, Wilson, and Cadorna are to have executive powers, and that thus there may be a confusion of authority with the various chiefs of generals staffs," expressing the hope that the sooner such a belief is dispelled the better. The Times adds:

"There is no reason why the new organization should affect the position held today by Sir William Robertson, who remains the executive head in England of the British armies in every theatre and to whose power of organization every fresh success of British arms bears witness. Still less should the change affect Sir Douglas Haig's command except, indeed, for the better.

Regret Issue of Personalities.

Several evening papers express regret that "questions of personalities and politics" have been allowed to enter the discussion of a joint council to direct the war operations of the Allies.

The Evening Standard describes as "mischief making" assertions that the position and influence of Robertson and Haig have been undermined or adversely affected by the constitution of the new allied war council."

The Parliamentary correspondent of the same paper reports that there is no "disposition among patriotic men at Westminster to think or talk of a political crisis or changes in the Government, but to make the best of the men in office and back them up with all our power."

The Pall Mall Gazette thinks it "a thousand pities that as soon as a sorely needed mechanism of joint control is established, needless agitation should be raised against what is described as the interference of politicians with military affairs. He may take it that whatever the status and constitution of the new bodies may prove to be, there will be no interference in the purely military sphere of soldiers, but it is axiom that policy must override strategy, and no Government worthy the name could devolve its powers and responsibilities on any other shoulders."

In The Westminster Gazette attention is called to the reply given by Ian Macpherson on behalf of the War Office in Parliament last week:

"No doubt was expressed by General Cadorna or by the Italian Government to the British General Staff of their ability to meet the attack which they knew was about to be made on them. No request from Italy for help to meet the attack was made before it took place."

In this connection the current issue of New Europe prints a comunication from "a particularly well informed Italian source," which supplies points of interest. The New Europe refers to the fact that it is no longer a secret that the Italian high command repeatedly urged upon the Allies the need of taking measures to forestall the German plan of staking her reserves of men and material in order to help Austria to remedy the dangerous situation, produced by Italy's advance on the Isonzo and the threat to such vital centres as Trieste and Laibach.

One Italian Proposal.

A frank Italian memorandum, laid before the allied conference, reckoned up the number of battalians and batteries which Germany might be able to employ on the Italian front at the time when Russia's military efficiency was still unimpaired. It was urged that the enemy's designs ought to be forestalled by a vigorous allied offensive on the Julian front, which, breaking down the Austrian defenses on the Carso, would have made it possible to carry the war into the very heart of Austria, while at the same time Russia, by a similar offensive on her southern front, kept the Hungarian forces opposing her fully engaged. Taken between these two combined assaults, the Monarchy might have been overpowered with comparative ease and reduced to a serious plight. The New Europe's informant continues:

"It is known that these Italian plans were discussed at the inter-allied conference of Paris and Rome. It is not yet possible to publish the details of these discussions, though they are known to many persons, and probably also to the enemy, but it is now generally known that Lloyd George always showed himself personally convinced of the merits of the Italian plan, and, as it has been affirmed, with little regard to the truth, that the Italian high command has never expressed doubts as to its ability to repl the Austro-German offensive, it is well to point out that it was at the conference of Rome early this year that France gave a pledge to supply an important contingent of men and artillery in the event of an Austro-German invasion of Italy."

The writer in conclusion advances the usual views as to the Italian front being an essential part of the Western front as a whole. As opposed to that, he says, "there prevailed in other circles the idea of a war conducted in water tight compartments, of which Italy was one of the less important," and finally says:

"But instead of treating the Isonzo as the decisive front before the enemy could impose upon us the necessity for doing so, we know that the precise opposite was done today. The fate of the whole war depends upon the manner in which this error is repaired."

In reply to recriminations that Italy's present disasters could have been averted, high military authorities insist that the present German flanking movements from the Trentino clearly show the inherent weakness of the Italian plan for striking a heart blow at Austria by way of Trieste and Laibach, particularly with Russia's power of simultaneous offensive eliminated from consideration.

Transference of the Franco-British striking power from the western front, they say, would have left Germany with reserves of men and material sufficient to threaten seriously, if not wholly defeat, the operation with the long lines of the communications open to lateral attack from practically impregnable positions.

May Reflect Premier's View.

Major David Davies, M. P., in the October issue of the West Outlook, a monthly which is understood to be in close touch with the Prime Minister, published a closely reasoned argument against the theory that the western front was the only decisive front in the war, adding:

"The statesman cuts the pattern. The soldiers provides the cloth."

The Evening Globe takes the diametrically opposite view that if the soldiers of the Alliance had been on a level with its statesmanship, "Where wauld have been our common civilization?" and warns the politicians against interference with matters they do not understand.

In a measure The Globe acquits Lloyd George personally of complicity in what it calls an intrigue to discredit the higher command of the British Army. It says:

"A certain clique, composed of personages with axes to grind, aspired to rid both of Sir Douglais Haig and Sir William Robertson, but latterly they realized that the double effort was beyond their powers and that their only hope of attaining their objective was to concentrate upon the Chief of the Imperial General Staff as the man less in the limelight. Having destroyed one, they might not unreasonably hope to compass the downfall of the other.

"The little cabal suffers mainly from inordinate vanity. Their amour-propre has been wounded because they were not allowed to dictate British strategy. They are insignificant in numbers, despite the Sunday press clique."

It also refers to "a certain campaign in a certain press reputed to be inspired from entourage politicians" and "intrigues against the general staff."

The radical Star, possibly from a temperamental disposition to oppose Lloyd George, arrays itself on the side of Lord Northcliffe and wants to know "if the politicians intend to break our hearts."

The Westminster Gazette tries to pour oil on the troubled waters by explaining that the new allied military staff is presumably to be a secretarial committee of the Governments of the allied nations, consisting probably of their Jrime Ministers; that the committee of Prime Ministers will not be a directorate, and that their military advisers will not have power to control or displace mommanders operating under their respective Governments.

"In unified strategy," concludes The Westminster Gazette, which on the whole appears to favor the "soldiers" rather than the "politicians," "there is no conflict between the northwestern and southwestern front. The declaration that the whole front is one covers both and requires no slackening of effort on the northern part but additional effort for defense on the southern."

Therein, according to the general hope, lies the solution of the problem.

GERMAN OFFICERS FLED AT ATTACK

Canadians Find Foe's Morale Declining Rapidly—Men Have No Confidence in Leaders.

CANADIAN ARMY HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, Nov. 12.—Increasing disorganization among the German forces is indicated in statements made by captured prisoners, while the decline in the morale of the officers is unquestioned.

One officer states that when the Canadians attacked on Saturday all the other officers in his battalion ran back to shelter, some three hundred yards behind the front line, leaving the warrant officers, non-commissioned officers, and men to fight. In another instance no less than eleven officers were captured in one dugout during the Canadian advance.

With such conduct from those commanding them, the non-commissioned officers and men have little confidence in their officers and growing discontent is reported among the rank and file. The statements of prisoners lead to the conclusion that the fabric of the German Army is held together by little more than iron discipline.

Reserve battalions in Germany are stated to be almost empty, picked men and experienced instructors having been sent to the Italian front, and the remaining available men in drafts to the western front.

ONLY GUNS ARE ACTIVE ON THE WESTERN FRONT

PARIS, Nov. 12.—Heavy gunfire is in progress at many points on the French front, but there has been no infantry action. The artillery activity has been especially noticeable on the Aisne and in the hotly contested area of Chaume Wood, near Verdun.

The day report of the War Office reads:

On the front between Chaume Wood and Bezonvaux (Verdun sector) active artillery fighting continued during the night.

On the remainder of the front the night was calm.

The night bulletin reads:

Quite violent artillery actions occurred in the region north of the Chemin des Dames, between the Miette and the Aisne, as well as in the sector of the Chaume Wood.

LONDON, Nov. 12.—Today's report of the British War Office says:

Beyond the usual artillery activity on both sides of the battle area there is nothing of special interest to report.

The report from Field Marshal Haig tonight reads:

The hostile artillery has shown considerable activity during the day northeast of Ypres and in the neighborhood of Steenbeek. Our own artillery activity continues.

There is nothing further to report.

BERLIN, Nov. 12, (via London.)—A local British attack on the Flanders front yesterday was repulsed, it is announced officially. The bulletin reads:

A short outburst of firing early in the morning heralded a British local attack, which began northwest of Passchendaele. It was repulsed.

During the day the fighting activity in Flanders was limited. The destructive artillery fire was revived in the evening, attaining greater intensity in the region of the Yser.

On the remainder of the western front there were no important events.

RUSH TO AID ITALY, EAGER FOR BATTLE

vance and are attempting to break the will of the civilian population. They are spreading talk of England's using other nations for her own selfish purposes. They declare that it is England's war and nobody else has any stake in it. Germany alone, they say, stands against England's self-seeking the world over.

Venice has been suddenly invaded by a swarm of German agents who have popped in from nobody knows where and are spreading peace propaganda. These people make unauthorized use of the Pope's name, saying that everything has been arranged by the Vatican for peace and that Italy will be well treated.

This was the method pursued in the preliminary softening of the front of the Second Army. Opposite these troops appeared Austrian troops similarly affected with peace longings and socialistic tendencies. There was general fraternization and an understanding that both sides would refuse to fire on one another.

On the day of the attack these particular Austrian troops had been transferred elsewhere and their places taken by German shock divisions. But the Italian corps kept their fraternal promises and the Germans went right through them.

ITALIANS URGE US TO FIGHT AUSTRIA

should be represented by their own American correspondents rather than by Italians or the use of English services.

As I said in one of my cables from the Italian front, "Is this a gang fight or not?" Are we all in a common war, or is American trying to hunt with the hounds and run with the hare? We loan Italy money, but we cannot send her men—not as a serious military aid—Italians don't ask that—but as a moral demonstration whose value would be incalculable. Our ships transport to Italy wheat or coal or steel, but theoretically at least we have no right to fire on an Austrian submarine until it has actually launched a torpedo that will send the ship, cargo, and American sailors to the bottom.

Her Need of Coal and Wheat.

That brings me to the question of material assistance. It may be summed up in two words—coal and wheat. Italy neds other things—steel and guns, munitions, and rolling stock for railroads—but her need for them is less imperative. On coal and wheat depends the whole economic and physical life of the country—the heart's blood of her industries and the food of her people. In America we think the Italian masses live on spaghetti and macaroni, but they can do without either. Like the French, bread is their staple food and deprived of bread they will weaken under the strain. For the matter of that, spaghetti and macaroni are also prepared from wheat, so that either way you look at it wheat is the paramount necessity.

Unfortunately through a mistaken expectation of a short war, to which I referred in a previous dispatch, the Italian Government neglected to make economic conventions with her Western Allies on terms and at a time that would have enabled her to satisfy her present needs. She looks now to America.

And does America realize what failure to aid her might involve, what result might follow from disaster to Italy?

Remember France's burden has been borne long and is terrible beyond words. Nor are events in Russia calculated to lighten it. Should Italy also weaken it might well mean Germany's triumph. Is not that reason enough for the American people to insist on action?

KERENSKY IN BIG BATTLE WITH REBELS

the provinces generally is lacking. The correspondent then gives the following account of the termination of the fight of an armored car manned by military cadets in Petrograd Sunday afternoon:

"Toward 3 o'clock the car came to a standstill at the corner of Gogol Street and Isaac Square, owing to lack of petrol. Sailors took cover behind stacks of wood piled in the square and fired volleys at the car, which replied weakly.

"A sailor then crept toward the car. He reached it unobserved, put his rifle through a slit, and fired repeatedly. Other sailors rushed up and smashed open the doors, dragged out the wounded military cadets, bayoneted them, and threw them on the ground and stamped upon them until they were almost unrecognizable."

The correspondent then continues:

"Four military cadet schools have been the scenes of conflict. The young officers were called upon to surrender, but refused on the ground that they were 'acting under orders.' Some firing occurred and in the case of the Vladimir School the fight was prolonged, the revolutionary forces using field guns with somewhat disastrous results to the buildings. When the school finally was taken by the Red Guard some of the cadets were killed and their bodies thrown into the street. A Commissary of the Military Revolutionary Committee, in charge of the besiegers, was almost lynched in trying to save the lives of the youths. He was rescued only through the opportune arrival of a municipal committee."

A dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph from Petrograd, dated Sunday, says Premier Kerensky issued a proclamation saying he would remain Commander in Chief until a decision on the question had been reached by the Provisional Government.

The correspondent continues:

"After heavy fighting at Moscow, in which there were 700 casualties, the parties came to terms on the basis of the creation of a Socialistic Government, including Bolsheviki.

"The Petrograd Railway Union sent an ultimatum to the Workmen's and Soldiers' Delegates and the Safety of the Country Committee demanding that they effect conciliation by organizing all the democratic power, otherwise the union would call a general strike. The Bolsheviki agreed to this, but the other democratic groups were unwilling to negotiate with the Bolsheviki until their entire surrender. Negotiations, however, were resumed and the Railway Union deferred the strike for twelve hours.

"The Bolsheviki have abandoned their offensive attitude, and now consider themselves in the position of organizers of defense revolutions against the armies of Kerensky, Korniloff, and Kaledines. The Petrograd garrison has elected a special committee to guarantee the safety of the population. Army headquarters express themselves in favor of a combination of the democratic groups."

A Reuter dispatch from Stockholm says that travelers arriving on the frontier from Russia report that the attempt of Nikolai Lenine to form a Cabinet in Petrograd failed, that the Foreign Office officials refused to accept Leon Trotzky as Foreign Minister, and that in Moscow another Government has been proclaimed, and it is feared there will be much bloodshed.

In Finland, the travelers are reported as saying, the situation is desperate. Anarchy is on the increase, and acts of violence and even murder committed on the streets by the Maximalists are frequent occurrences.

Trotzky's Boast.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 12—7 P. M.—Leon Trotzky, principal aid of Nikolai Lenine, at the Smolny Institute today replied to a request from The Associated Press for his views on the situation as follows:

"I may say that we are making all our statements now by means of cannon. I have nothing to say otherwise."

Premier Kerensky is reported living in the palace at Gatchina.

The Bolshevik leaders appear to be confident of the support of the army.

PETROGRAD, Sunday, Nov. 11, 9 P. M.—The military cadets, or "Junkers," encouraged by the reported proximity to the capital of the forces of Premier Kerensky, made an ineffectual attempt today to regain control of the city. This resulted in almost constant street fighting in various quarters.

Early in the morning the cadets surprised the small guard of Bolsheviki at the Central Telephone Exchange and, backed by armored motor cars, forced the Bolsheviki to surrender. Until nearly dusk the Grand Morskaia was the scene of a battle between Bolsheviki troops and cadets, to the number of about 100, who were firing from windows and supported by a machine gun in the armored car in the street in front of the building. The cadets surrendered when they had exhausted their ammunition.

On the Nevsky Prospekt cadets with an armored car also tried to make a stand, and precipitated another battle in which most of them were killed or made prisoner. The cadets apparently were the same as those who were defending the Winter Palace Wednesday night and who were permitted their liberty by the Bolsheviki troops after the surrender of the palace.

From the windows of The Associated Press headquarters, situated a half block distant, an officer was observed to fall in the street, apparently dead. An onlooker hiding in a doorway was struck by a glancing bullet and wounded in the arm. The ambulances were kept busy.

New proclamations, both by the Bolsheviki and the adherents of Kerensky, appeared at intervals throughout the day. They called on the people and the troops to support this or that side, and attracted crowds wherever posted. It is reported that one of the proclamations, signed by Kerensky and dated Gatchina, was dropped from an airplane.

The official title of the new Workmen's and Soldiers' Government is the Temporary Peasants' and Workmen's Government. The Workmen's and Soldiers' Congress has appointed a new central committee, composed of sixty-two Bolsheviki, twenty-nine Social Revolutionists, six Social Democratic Internationalists, three Ukraine Socialists and one Social Revolution Maximalist. A call has been issued for a Peasants' Congress.

CITY COUNCIL FOILS REDS.

Forms Committee of Public Safety with Boy Scout Guard.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 11, (Dispatch to The London Daily Chronicle.)—This is an amazing revolution. With the Bolsheviki Government running Petrograd, a Cadet Cabinet apparently forming in Moscow, the Provisional Government maintaining that, appearances notwithstanding, it is not yet dead, and a non-Bolsheviki but Socialist Government under consideration here, a certain amount of disorder might be diagnosed. Yet the sober truth is that Petrograd is as perfectly calm as a London suburb on bank holiday. There naturally is much talk, and people go on little pilgrimages to inspect the front of the Winter Palace, pockmarked with bullet holes, or to see the places where two shells fell in the town, doing extraordinarily little damage, and that is all.

On Friday morning at 6 o'clock the All-Russia Soviet Conference ended, having elected a new Government. During the rest of the day the Smolny Institute, the Bolsheviki headquarters, directed all their energies to the task of governing Russia. Lenine's Cabinet decided that the elections for the Constituent Assembly must be held on Nov. 25, suppressed all opposition papers, and passed certain regulations extending the food control powers and duties of the local authorities.

Some members of the Cabinet visited the departments, making the unpleasant discovery that the staffs refused to recognize them. One Government office after another went on strike for the duration of Lenine's Cabinet.

Meanwhile the Military Revolutionary Committee struggled with the situation, receiving endless telegrams from the provincial Soviets and garrisons and holding some hundreds of conferences. The delegates and soldiers, not having any particular reason for immediately dispersing, remained at the Smolny Institute. I sat among them for an hour or two, and could not help being struck by their change of demeanor from the early hours of the morning. Then they had been dominated by Lenine and Trotzky, and had been unanimous and fearless. Now, leaderless, they were almost discordant and almost fearful. The Military Revolutionary Committee, after much insistence, sent a soldier to report to the meeting on the situation. He made matters no better, and the meeting broke up gloomily.

My tramload of soldiers speculated as to whether things might not have gone too far. I heard one warrior go the length of saying that there was something heroic about Milukoff and Rodzianko.

During the last two days opposition to the Bolsheviki has been crystallizing in the City Council. This body, in the absence of its Bolshevik members, had concluded a working agreement with the Moderate Socialists and formed a Committee of Public Safety. The force is purely a moral council, not supported by any part of the garrison, and its building is guarded by twenty Boy Scouts.

The City Council got into telephone communication with Moscow. There the Bolsheviki attempted to seize the power but were opposed by the garrison and finally driven into the Kremlin and isolated. On Friday morning firing was still going on, but there was no doubt of the issue. There are rumors that Kaledines, Rodzianko, and Milukoff are in Moscow with Korniloff, rescued by Cossacks from imprisonment, forming a new Government. They will probably be joined by the non-Bolshevik Petrograd Socialist leaders. The worst blow against Lenine is the decision of the Railway Men's Union not to transmit messages of the Petrograd Soviet.

It is clear the Bolsheviki are no longer able to master the situation. They are hampered by obvious insufficiency of reliable men. Highly responsible duties have been given to very young youths, sometimes with ludicrous results. The Petrograd garrison, moreover, is wavering. It contains many who want peace and nothing else and are as unwilling to strive against Kerensky as against Wilhelm. A fight with the Cossacks is not their idea of a quiet life. Consequently there is much dissension.

The sailors on the whole are willing to continue the struggle against the Provisional Government. Yesterday some thousands marched into Petrograd to defend it against the oncoming army. They looked a particularly unbeautiful and reckless body with a sprinkling of fellows who occasionally fired in the air to show theircontempt for the Bourgeoise.

Apparently very little damage has been done. Bad shooting, in fact, was characteristic of the Bolsheviki revolution early Thursday morning. About ten shells were fired from a field gun against the Winter Palace at 250 yards range. All missed or failed to explode with one exception. This shell smashed a picture, made a hole in a wall, and left the frame intact.

With some difficulty I obtained permission yesterday to inspect the interior of the palace. The officers discussed whether representatives of the British press should be admitted. They explained that much damage had been comtited and that they were naturally ashamed to let the world know how much. Finally it was decided I could go anywhere I pleased. They had done everything in their power to prevent excesses and, after all, truth was truth.

I had heard vague stories of damage done by the Bolsheviki? Soldiers hooligans, but was entirely unprepared for the actual spectacle. Rooms which had been occupied by the Provisional Government were ankle deep in stationery, newspapers, and correspondence. Every cupboard, every drawer, had been forced and emptied. Pictures had been slashed, glass drawers and cabinets and furniture smashed. Chairs and seats had been ripped up and locks forced. Everything, in fact, too large or too heavy to remove, had been wantonly damaged in every possible way in almost every room in the huge building.

Fortunately, the Provisional Government had stored the principal art treasures. Fortunately, too, the cellars had been too securely protected to enable the contents to be looted, or there would have been no limits to the destruction. The chapel containing treasured coins was also saved by obstinate locks, but obviously efforts had been made to gain admittance. The sight of this senseless destruction was certainly calculated to qualify revolutionary sympathy.

Just one more point:

The ex-Emperor's cabinet was wildly wrecked. I found a pamphlet in the English language, the only reading matter in the room. I picked it up and saw on a flyleaf an inscription by the late W. T. Stead presenting his brochure on James Russell Lowell to Nicholas.

While it is difficult to get at the truth from current rumors, there apparently is little doubt that some excesses were committed last evening. It is equally difficult to get at the truth about the absent Kerensky. Yesterday reports filled Petrograd that he was at Tsarskoe-Selo and that a battle was taking place. Friends arriving from Tsarskoe-Selo in the evening told me there was no battle, and they believed the Cossacks were somewhere in the neighborhood. Life in Tsarskoe was continuing normally.

As to Moscow, each side is announcing the capitulation of the other. Newspapers here are few and practically devoid of news. They contain little else than appeals, rumors, abuse, and lamentations.

OPTIMISM IN WASHINGTON.

No Doubt Now Felt That the Bolshiviki Will Be Overthrown.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—All doubt that the Maximalists in Petrograd will be deposed has disappeared in Government and diplomatic quarters here. Officials are now debating whether Premier Kerensky, General Korniloff, or some other leader will take charge of the Government to rise out of the ashes of the Maximalist authority. The complete overthrow of the Bolsheviki is predicted.

Credence is given to the report from Moscow that the Maximalists have been overthrown there. Doubt is expressed, however, in the circles best qualified to judge of the situation, that the bourgeois element, which is strong in its cohesiveness, will come to the support of Kerensky or Korniloff, whom Kerensky deposed from the supreme command of the Russian Army. The Cossacks, who are opposed to the Maximalist movement, are believed to favor Korniloff instead of Kerensky for head of the Government. Korniloff has strong supporters in the army, in spite of his effort to establish a virtual dictatorship.

Dispatches to the State Department today from Moscow, via Tiflis and Bombay, told that Kerensky had left army headquarters and was marching on Petrograd at the head of a considerable force of troops. Korniloff was reported to be at Moscow. The advices to the department contained the information that the Bolsheviki rule at Moscow had been overthrown, and the statement was added that it was believed that it would soon end in Petrograd.

In spite of the unsettled State of Russian affairs plans for the shipment of supplies from this country are going forward without interruption. Contracts were approved today for nearly 2,000,000 pairs of shoes for the Russian Government at a conference of manufacturers, the Russian Purchasing Commission, and representatives of the Council of National Defense. It is understood, however, that the contracts will not be signed until the Russian commissioners have had an opportunity to communicate with their Government and await developments.

The shoes are to be of standard types to eliminate waste of leather, and will cost from $1.80 to $3.73 a pair. They will be used for civilian workers of the Government, chiefly railroad men and miners.

TEUTONS CAPTURE 14,000 ITALIANS

the Italian artillery from using them as observation posts. The Italian artillery reply is spirited from a considerable number of guns which the retreating army succeeded in bringing back from the old front.

The battle front has two main sectors. The lower extends from Feltre to the sea, and the upper from Feltre westward. The Vidor bridge, where the last Italian rear guards crossed the Piave, is half way down the lower sector. Near Feltre the river turns into the mountains, with a valley and a railway on the west bank.

The enemy is on the west bank in this mountain region, and may attempt to come down the valley and along the railway. The Italians have no advantage of a river defense at this point, but they have strongly intrenched themselves.

The fight at Asiago was clearly a feeler to test the strength of the Italian line. Snow is falling in the upper regions, and a severe cold spell prevails.

By The Associated Press.

ITALIAN HEADQUARTERS IN NORTHERN ITALY, Nov. 11, (Delayed.)—The enemy's operations on the north and east in an attempt at encirclement of the Italians have not succeeded. The menace on the Italian left wing also is practically past.

The reconcentration of the Italian Army along the newly chosen line of defense is now virtually an accomplished feat. The troops have taken up their positions in trenches, the gun emplacements have been made ready, and the whole vast organization is preparing for the battle that is not apparently far off. The men are in good spirits, and a feeling of determination prevails in all ranks.

Retirement of the Italian force in the Carnia district of Northern Venetia has shortened the Italian main front, which now presents a compact line extending about twenty miles along the new river defenses to the sea.

The Allies are represented on the new front by some British batteries from the Carso. The presence of allied forces is regarded as of the highest importance for its moral effect on the Italian troops, which thus far have borne the entire shock, as well as for its purely military value. England's announcement that she will continue to send reinforcements without delay and spare no effort to prevent a further invasion of Italy arouses the keenest satisfaction and enthusiasm here. The visit of General Wilson of the British General Staff has also inspired renewed confidence as to the intentions of the Allies.

It may now be stated that the present line of defense is the first which the supreme command has ever considered seriously since the beginning of the retreat. The Tagliamento and Livensa lines were designed merely to block the progress of the enemy up to the present defenses. The correspondent received this information authoritatively ten days ago, but was then unable to divulge the location of the line, for reasons dictated by military necessity.

Yesterday's report from General Diaz, the new commander, said that Italian rearguards had crossed the Piave River near Susegana, after destroying the bridges. This river should be noted carefully. A glance at the map will show that, after the Tagliamento and the Livenza, the Piave is the first important stream capable of interposing a strong tactical defense. The upper part of the river is backed by the slopes of the Grappa hills. Further down it has behind it the Asolo hills and the large forest of Montello, both of which are advantageous in giving high advanced wooded points in a flat country. The river is deep, wide, stony, and bridgeless. Its mouth is twenty-five miles north of Venice. Where the precise line is cannot be indicated further, but this gives the essential features.

For several days the gravity of the situation for Venice has not been underestimated, and suitable precautionary measures have been taken to protect this great art centre. The city preserves comparative calm, while picturesque gondolas, filled with passengers and goods, take departing throngs to the station. The municipality is affording every assistance to those who are leaving the city and is allowing two lire (about 40 cents) daily to the needy until they are located elsewhere. The Government is keenly alive to the situation as regards the artistic treasures of the city, and military and naval operations doubtless would be considered secondary to saving priceless monuments like the Campanile, the Palace of the Doges and St. Mark's from bombardment. All the chief paintings of Titian and Paolo Veronese have been removed to Florence, but scores of great frescoes cannot be taken away.

The splendid service which the Itlaian cavalry has performed as a rearguard has a melancholy sequel in the death of Rubin de Cervin, Major General of Cavalry, who was commanding an infantry division. He fell at the head of his troops and died while being attended by military surgeons.

The heroic resistance of part of the Thirty-sixth Division of Infantry has also received the highest praise. It resisted surrender until surrounded by an enormously superior force, with its ammunition exhausted.

Information from the territory occupied by the Austro-Germans is to the effect that Cividale, Gradisca, and Palmanova have been virtually destroyed by bombardment and fire. When the Austrians occupied Gorizia they ordered the whole town illuminated as a sign of rejoicing, which had to be done on pain of death. The black and yellow flag again waves in the place of Italy's tricolor over the Castle of Gorizia.

Monfalcone, also in the hands of the Austrians, is again in full swing of activity. At the navy yard there the Austrians have taken possession of an uncompleted warship which had been left there by them when they withdrew. This the Italians had transformed into an observatory, from which King Victor Emmanuel often gazed at the coast stretching toward the Istrian Peninsula and the longed-for City of Trieste.

Exploit of Italian Rear Guard.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, Nov. 11, (Delayed.)—Once more Italian soldiers have given proof of heroic self-sacrifice. Part of their rear guard in the Sugana Valley was so intent upon keeping the enemy in check that it didn't perceive that it had become isolated from the rest of the army and was being slowly surrounded by the enemy. On observing the situation the commander gathered his soldiers together, exhorting them to fight like brave Italians, remembering the heroic deeds of their ancestors, and to attempt, at the cost of their lives, to break through the ranks of the enemy.

The troops, which were posted on high ground, awaited darkness and, when the Austrians suspended their attacks, apparently thinking that the Italians would surely be compelled to surrender on account of lack of food, in the midst of a fierce gale, their guns firmly clasped in their hands, their knives in their mouths, crept nearer and nearer to the enemy. Before the Austrians were aware of what happened, the Italians counterattacked, and the Austrians, despite their overwhelming numbers, gave way. The Italians cut a path right through them and regained positions of safety.

ITALIAN DEFENSE STUBBORN.

Capture of Northern Troops Not Regarded as Impairing Resistance.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—The Venetian drive of the Austro-German forces has reached the point—pivotal in its relation to the success or failure of the larger phases of their military and political plans—where the safety of Venice and the integrity of the Piave River line are very largely dependent on the result of fighting in the difficult mountainous area northwest of Venice.

Through the valleys of the Piave and the Brenta, west of it, in this Alpine area Austro-German forces are being driven in a determined effort to smash the Italian left wing. From both Berlin and Rome, though dispatches are meagre, comes plenty of evidence that the Italians are stubbornly defending these river routes to the plains. At points the Germans have continued their progress slowly, while at others the Italians appear to have checked the invaders.

The most important gain for the Germans is their advance down the valley of the upper Piave from Belluno to Feltre, a distance of about fifteen miles as the crow flies. In connection with this advance the Berlian official report says that the Austro-German columns cut off 10,000 Italians near Longarone in the upper Piave Valley. The isolation and probable loss of these detachments constitutes no serious blow to the main forces of the Italian armies digging themselves in along that section of the plains between Venice and the foothills of the Alps, and does not affect the status of those Italian forces intrusted with the main defense of the routes from the mountains along the lines of the upper Piave and the upper Brenta to the plains.

The advance of the Austro-German forces down the valley toward Feltre was rapid for mountain movements, for they appear to have covered the air-line distance of fifteen miles between the two points in a single day.

The German effort to turn the left wing of the Italians is being concentrated upon the Feltre-Vidor-Bassano-Asiago quadrilateral. This is a rough, mountainous area, in the centre of which stands Monte Grappa, which is nearly in the centre of the quadrilateral, about equally distant from the Piave on the east and the Brenta on the west. It is toward Feltre, in the northeast corner of this quadrilateral, that the Austro-German forces which moved down through Longarone and Belluno are pressing their thrust from the northeast along highways which mainly follow the west bank of the upper Piave River.

Asiago, in what is known as the Altipiano dei Sette Comuni, (the high plateau of the seven towns,) is near the northwest corner of the quadrilateral, is the objective of the Austro-German columns which have been pressing their attack from the Sugana Valley and the City of Trent. Half way between Feltre and Asiago the Brenta Valley enters this important quadrilateral, extending southward toward Bassano through a mountain region which naturally lends itself to defense. Vidor, at the southeastern corner of the quadrilateral, commands the uppermost of the four main River crossings of the Piave which the Italians must defend so long as they attempt to hold the line of the river.

WAR BOND BUYERS SEEK MISSING AGENT

Federal Authorities Take Possession of Elmer Dwiggins's Office.

PATRONS WANT ACCOUNTING

Insurance Man Sold Liberty Bonds on Partial Payment Plan to Thousands of Persons.

Federal agents have taken charge of the offices and papers of Elmer Dwiggins, General Agent for New York and New Jersey of the Bankers' Life Insurance Company of Des Moines, Iowa, who has been conducting a Liberty Loan $1 a week partial payment plan involving more than $500,000 worth of bonds and nearly 10,000 subscribers. The announcement that "because of complaints received by the United States District Attorney, Post Office Inspectors had been sent to investigate the Liberty Loan activities of Elmer Dwiggins" was made yesterday by Assistant United States District Attorney John C. Knox, who said discrepancies of $75,000 yet to be accounted for had been discovered in Dwiggins's accounts.

Dwiggins has not been seen since last Saturday, when he left the office where the Post Office men were working over his private papers. He said he was going for luncheon, but he did not return. More than a score of subscribers to his plan who came to his office at 165 Broadway yesterday to make payment on the bonds they had purchased on the $1 a week plan were told by the officers that no more money would be received at present. The subscribers were asked to come back Thursday, when they would be given full information as to the status of the Dwiggins Liberty Loan plan.

Elmer Dwiggins came here last February to take over the agency of the Bankers Life Company, his territory covering both New Jersey and New York. As soon as the Government announced the flotation of the first Liberty Loan, Dwiggins turned over a working force of solicitors and stenographers to handle Liberty Loan subscriptions under a plan he himself devised.

The proposition was simply one of the many partial payment clubs which grew up under the Governmental plan of selling the bonds on the installment plan. A small card, engraved with a picture of the Statue of Liberty, and another of Benjamin Franklin, with the latter's well-known saying, "Save and have" as a heading was given to each member of the "Liberty Loan Extension Club."

Small squares on the card, each one dated a week apart, the payment days falling on Mondays, were punched as the subscriber paid his dollar to Dwiggins. It was noted on the card that the payment was to be made at the Bankers Life office, at 165 Broadway. And the by-laws of the organization, termed "Purpose and Object of the Liberty Loan Extension Club," were signed by Elmer Dwiggins, General Agency Manager.

Dwiggins is said to have bought about $350,000 worth of bonds of the first issue and something more than that amount of the second. It was said yesterday that most of his purchases had been made through the Irving National Bank and the National City Bank.

He took six solicitors of the Bankers Life—they were paid throughout the two loan campaign by the company—and set them to work placing these cards. The most fertile field was among public school children, and hundreds of his cards were taken in the schools. Small retail merchants were easily persuaded to put up lacards announcing the organization of the club, and in many cases these merchants took the first payment of $1, sending it to Dwiggins. Thereafter all transactions were made between the subscribers and Dwiggins's offices.

Demand Their Money Back.

News of the Government's interest in Dwiggins and his Liberty Loan Club, when it became known yesterday, caused much excitement among the investors in his proposition. At the offices the Post Office Inspectors told everybody to "come back Thursday." One woman demanded her money, and became angry when told that it was not even certain she could get it by Thursday. A man told a TIMES reporter last night that his three children had purchased a fifty-dollar bond each at Public School 62. He said he had been unable to obtain any promises of relief from the Government.

Elmer Dwiggins was first known in Chicago, where he and his brother organized a firm known as Valentine & Co. In 1895 that firm was denied the use of the United States mail, and the Dwigginses came to New York, where they established the firm of J. R. Willard & Co., with offices at 55 Broadway. The practises of the firm grew so notorious that the Dwigginses left the country for a while. It is said that Elmer sold insurance in Mexico and in Texas. The next heard of him he was back in New York engaged in selling real estate.

PEACE IN VICTORY, WILSON TO LABOR

anxiety for peace that had come "from one of the Central Powers," and declared that it meant "that the people in that Central Power know that if the war ends as it stands they will, in effect, themselves be vassals of Germany, notwithstanding that they do not wish in their pride and proper spirit of nationality to be absorbed and dominated," and as "fatuous as the dreamers of Russia" were those persons in this country, he declared emphatically, who suppose that "the free industry and enterprise of the world can continue if the Pan German plan is achieved and the German power fastened upon the world."

The President asserted that Germany had started the war, and said he would leave confirmation of this statement to the verdict of history. He referred to Germany's growth to a "place in the sun," and asked why she was not satisfied when she gained that position. In answer he described the German Government's methods of controlling the competition of its industries and asserted that "all the while there was lying behind its thought, in its dreams for the future, a political control which would enable it in the long run to dominate the labor and the industry of the world."

Mr. Wilson cited in this connection the Berlin-to-Bagdad Railway, which, he said, was constructed to run the threat of force down the flank of the industrial undertakings of half a dozen other countries, so that when German competition came in it would not be resisted too far, because there was always the possibility of getting German armies into the heart of that country quicker than any other armies could get there.

Suming it up, he said that Germany was determined that the political power of the world should belong to her, but that never before had such ambitions been based upon so exact and precise and scientific a plan of domination.

Strengthened Patriotic Party.

It was a speech which did a great deal to strengthen the patriotic party in the convention and gained force by being delivered at Mr. Gompers's side from a platform, at either end of which paintings of the President of the United States and the President of the American Federation of Labor faced each other.

Further support for Mr. Gompers developed in telegrams read at the afternoon session. Frank J. Hayes, President of the United Mine Workers, who will arrive later in the week, telegraphed that the report that he and his delegaiton were going to lead a fight against Mr. Gompers was absolutely false.

"We propose to stand behind the Government," he said, "and behind those loyal to it, till Kaiserism and militarism are wiped from the face of the earth."

This is of considerable weight, as the United Mine Workers have 3,500 of the 25,000 votes in the federattion.

Other telegrams expressing firm support were received from the Presidents of the State Federations of Washington and Arizona and from John Spargo, who resigned from the Executive Committee of the Socialist Party some months ago because of its Germanizing tendencies.

Men who have been vigorous in their opposition to Mr. Gompers before the convention this afternoon denied that they had ever opposed him at all, and labor leaders who have been conspicuous in support of the Government's war policy asserted that if any other man were nominated for the Presidency, Gompers would beat him ten to one. It had been surmised that the radical faction had planned to use strategy in their attempt to seize the Presidency and to concentrate their attack at some unexpected moment, but, so far as could be judged from the routine of the opening sessions, the organization has a firm grip on the convention and does not purpose to relax its watchfulness. If the pacifists accomplish anything before the convention is over there will have to be a big shift in sentiment.

President Wilson made a very hasty visit to Buffalo. He arrived at 9:15 A. M., accompanied by Mrs. Wilson, Secretary J. P. Tumulty, Rear Admiral Grayson, his physician, and a squad of Secret Service men and rode from the station to the Broadway Auditorium, where the convention is being held, in a procession headed by Mr. Gompers and with a large number of delegates with the provisional training regiment from Fort Niagara, commanded by Colonel John A. Heavey, acting as escort. After finishing his address he left at once and was conducted back to the station by the student officers.

Governor Whitman's Address.

Following the President, a procession of public officials and labor leaders welcomed the delegates. Governor Whitman praised the Federation as having "led in the response to the call to arms that settled forever any question as to the patriotism of the American working man."

"American labor," he continued, "is insistent that the great progress that democracy has made during the last hundred years shall not be checked nor forgotten. The fight that democracy may live is the fight for labor, for labor and democracy are one, they cannot survive the one without the other.

"We can feed the armies of our own country and of our allies, we can supply them with munitions, but it is through the American workingman, who, by his faith in his country, by his belief in democracy, by his willingness to sacrifice for the ideals that have made this a free land, the land of opportunity, that we are to encourage the workingmen of other nations associated with us and throw down the gauntlet to those slave-driven people and military-ridden classes of Germany.

"In the readjustment that is to come after the war there will be no principle more fundamental than the declaration of the Clayton Act that the labor of a human being is not an article of commerce. In the last hundred years we have seen the entire civilized world follow America's lead in the protection of young workers. I trust that it will not be long before on the statute books of New York we shall have a law, as has frequently been urged by the Industrial Commission, raising the age limit for young workers in special industries."

A. A. Landon, President of the Buffalo Chamber of Commerce, a former labor leader himself, asked the delegates in his speech if they realized what it would mean to them if the Kaiser won.

"The German trade union as operated in Germany is pretty much of a joke," he said. "They strike regularly every year. The employer takes a vacation for a couple of weeks and goes to a cure to get the booze boiled out of him; the military keep the men off the streets, and, after taking a vacation, they go back to work under the same terms and conditions that they left.

"There are no classes in this country. The rich man who is always talking about the working class is a snob, and the workingman who is always referring to himself and his people as the working class is a bootlicker.

"Personal disagreements or efforts to take advantage of this war by either capital or labor are un-American; and if the men are not loyal to the nation they should at least be loyal to their own flesh and blood.

"How are we going to excuse our negligence to our sons and brothers who come back legless, armless, and eyeless, if they return at all, knowing that the reason was that we failed to back up our boys at the front? That the boy's very father, who refused for some reason or other to make him another shell to shoot, or another bayonet to defend himself with, or refused to load enough food on ships so that he could be fed, or refused to build the ship so that food and clothing and medical supplies could be carried to him over the sea. How are we going to square ourselves with him and with our consciences?"

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—President Wilson returned to Washington tonight, having been absent less than thirty hours on his trip to Buffalo.

At several stations on the return trip the President appeared on the platform of his car and shook hands with the crowds. At most of the places he was urged to speak, but he declined, answering an appeal at one town by saying:

"I only brought one cartridge with me, and I have fired that. I hope it reached the mark."

At another place a man shouted: "Tell us about the war!"

"That's too big an order to fill," the President replied.

FEDERATION REPORT BREATHES LOYALTY

Wants Labor at Peace Council and Is Opposed to "Vindictive" Indemnities.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 12.—Demand for "adequate and direct" representation of wage earners at the forthcoming world peace conference is made in the annual report of the Eecutive Council of the American Federation of Labor, submitted today to the federation in convention here. The report declares that the world war "must wipe out all vestiges of the old conceit that the nation belongs to the ruler."

Questions raised by the war occupy virtually the entire report. No room is left for doubt that the United States Government has the unanimous support of organized American labor in the war, and it is asserted with equal emphasis that the vital interests of the average citizen demand that he have a voice in the readjustments to come with the dawn of peace.

Optimism over labor achievements in the last year is tempered with a warning that benefits obtained from emergency opportunities must be based on principles of human welfare, and not the result of taking advantage of the nation's necessity. Freedom of expression is upheld, but the report says those who abuse the freedom of the press to undermine the nation's free institutions should be punished as traitors.

President Wilson's war address to Congress is included in the report. Under the heading "Labor and the War" the report says:

"Under all circumstances it is the duty of any Government to protect its people against willful and wholesale murder. * * * A people unwilling to make the supreme sacrifice in support of the Government which undertakes to make that principle good are undeserving to live and enjoy the privilege of free, democratic government."

Against Vindictive Indemnities.

The duty of wage earners in the war is emphasized particularly in the section of the report devoted to "Peace Terms," which advocates an international agreement to secure peace and the settlement of the present war without "vindictive" indemnities or territorial changes. The section says:

"It is an imperative duty from which there is no escape that wage earners, as well as all other citizens of this republic, support our Government in its righteous effort to defend principles of humanity and to establish democracy in international relations. Because we desire permanent peace, it is our duty to fight and sacrifice until these purposes can be achieved.

"When nations can send representatives to negotiate peace terms in accord with this concept, we maintain that the basic provisions of the peace treaty should be formulated with regard to the rights, and welfare of the men, women, and children constituting the nations, rather than the Governments of the nations. The Government should be only an instrumentality of the people, instead of dominating and actuating their lives. This terrific war must wipe out all vestiges of the old concept that the nation belongs to the ruler of Government.

"We hold that the same principles should apply to relations between nations, and that secret diplomacy should be replaced by diplomatic representatives responsible to their own people and received by either the Parliament of the country to which they are accredited or by a representative of the people, responsible to them.

"Working people have never been properly represented in diplomatic affairs. The future must be constructed upon broader lines than the past. We insist, therefore, that the Government of the United States provide adequate and direct representatives of wage-earners among the plenipotentiaries sent to the Peace Congress, and urge upon the labor movements of other countries to take like action.

Proposed Basis for Peace.

"We urge the adoption of the following declarations as the basis upon which peace must be negotiated:

1. The combination of the free peoples of the world in a common covenant for genuine and practical co-operation to secure justice and, therefore, peace in relations between nations.
2. Governments derive their just power from the consent of the governed.
3. No political or economic restrictions meant to benefit some nations and to cripple or embarrass others.
4. No indemnities or reprisals based upon vindictive purposes or deliberate desire to injure, but to right manifest wrongs.
5. Recognition of the rights of small nations and of the principle, "no people must be forced under sovereignty under which it does not wish to live."
6. No territorial changes or adjustments of power except in furtherance of the welfare of the peoples affected and in furtherance of world peace.

"In addition to these basic principles which are based upon declarations of our President of these United States, there should be incorporated in the treaty the following declarations, fundamental to the best interests of all nations and of vital importance to wage-earners:

1. No article or commodity shall be shipped or delivered in international commerce in the production of which children under the age of 16 have been employed or permitted to work.
2. It shall be declared that the basic workday in industry and commerce shall not exceed eight hours.
3. Involuntary servitude shall not exist except as a punishment for crime whereof the party shall have been duly convicted.
4. Establishent of trial by jury.

Labor Reconstruction.

"We suggest that all prejudice and partisan spirit can best be eliminated by reconstructing international labor relations and thus bring to new problems and a new era, activity and co-operation unhampered and unperverted by former alliances or old feuds. The basis of reconstruction should be the trade union movements of the various countries. We recommend that an international labor conference of representatives of the trade union movements of all countries be held at the same time and place as the World Peace Congress, that labor may be in touch with plans under consideration and may have the benefit of information and counsel of those participating in the Congress."

Reconstruction after the war will raise new issues, the report holds, and the nation cannot discard lightly the idea of service engendered by co-operation of all classes against a common enemy. Pointing to the experience of Great Britain, the council says:

"There has been a recognition of the principle that those associated in the work of production ought to have a voice in the management of those things concerning their interest and welfare. There has been recognition for the thought that industrial disfranchisement is as unjust as political disfranchisement. * * *

"In our own country there is evident in every kind of war work the necessity for some national agencies for better adjusting the supply of workers. We are entering a period where there must be greater economy in the use of the man power of our country. A central, efficient employment agency with its branches is plainly necessary in performing the gigantic task that is now before the Emergency Fleet Corporation and in the necessary work of production of war supplies.

"With the withdrawal of hundreds of thousands of men for military purposes there is necessity for readjustment in the industrial field. Effective employment agencies, under the control of the Department of Labor, co-operating with local agencies and associations, would be an invaluable adjunct to our war machinery. Such agencies will also be keenly needed in the transition period that will follow the declaration of peace and the work of demobilization.

"We urge the immediate necessity of providing for some adequate form of employment agencies in this country, under Federal control, and co-ordinating all local efforts along this line.

"We further recommend that some action be taken by this convention insisting upon our Government making such plans for demobilization so that men will remain in the employment of the Government until they can be provided with remunerative employment through Government employment agencies, unless they have employment opportunities already open to them."

Since the war began, the report says, the American labor movement has secured the "best agreements with the Government that have been secured in any other warring countries."

"The agreements established a new period in the industrial world," says the report, "a period in which the Government has sanctioned standards based upon principles of human welfare and has substituted these standards for the old system under which profits were paramount."

Conscription of Labor.

Concerning the much-discussed suggestion for the conscription of labor, the report says:

"Immediately after the declaration of war by the United States Government an agitation was commenced for the purpose of organizing what was to be known as an 'Industrial Reserve.' It was proposed that men in industry should become part of a semi-military organization to be directed and controlled by our military establishment, to the end that those employed in industry could be shifted from one location to another. Because of its military feature, the proposition was opposed by the officers of the American Federation of Labor.

"In the light of the experience gleaned in foreign countries now engaged in war, it appears that the shifting of workers has not only been necessary but vital to the carrying on of the great conflict. Several plans have been proposed, but none thus far has been accepted as a proper solution of the problem. If the war continues for any considerable period, this question will have to be met. The primary agency necessary for dealing with proper adjustment of workers is a national employment bureau, equipped to give workers information of employment opportunities and employers information of available and suitable workers. It is one of the necessary and essential activities of the war that certain industries on occasions are called upon to materially increase production, and, in this event, some plan must be inaugurated to meet the needs of the Government."

The report recognizes the possibility that war conditions may bring about a "more general advent" of women in industry. Demand is made that equal pay be given for equal work without regard to sex, which, the report says, can be obtained only through organization of the new wage earners.

Urgent recommendation is made by the council that the eight-hour day be extended by administrative authority to all commerce and industry as a war measure.

Pacifist movements to distract the nation's attention from the business of war are answered by the council in the republication of the declaration adopted by the American Alliance for Labor and Democracy, which met at Minneapolis.

The report of the council, in accordance with the usual procedure, was referred to committees named by President Gompers. Its several sections will be taken up by the convention as soon as reported back.

PRESIDENT'S SPEECH AT LABOR CONVENTION

BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 12.—Following is the text of the speech delivered by President Wilson at the convention of the American Federation of Labor here this afternoon:

Mr. President, Delegates of the American Federation of Labor, Ladies and Gentlemen: I esteem it a great privilege and a real honor to be thus admitted to your public councils. When your Executive Committee paid me the compliment of inviting me here, I gladly accepted the invitation, because it seems to me that this, above all other times in our history, is the time for common counsel, for the drawing not only of the energies but of the minds of the nation together. I thought that it was a welcome opportunity for disclosing to you some of the thoughts that have been gathering in my mind during the last momentous months.

I am introduced to you as the President of the United States, and yet I would be pleased if you would put the thought of the office into the background and regard me as one of your fellow-citizens who had come here to speak, not the words of authority, but the words of counsel, the words which men should speak to one another who wish to be frank in a moment more critical perhaps than the history of the world has ever yet known, a moment when it is every man's duty to forget himself, to forget his own interests, to fill himself with the nobility of a great national and world conception, and act upon a new platform elevated above the ordinary affairs of life, elevated to where men have views of the long destiny of mankind.

I think that in order to realize just what this moment of counsel is it is very desirable that we should remind ourselves just how this war came about and just what is for. You can explain most wars very simply, but the explanation of this is not so simple. Its roots run deep into all the obscure soils of history, and in my view this is the last decisive issue between the old principles of power and the new principles of freedom.

Germany Before the War.

The war was started by Germany. Her authorities deny that they started it. But I am willing to let the statement I have just made await the verdict of history. And the thing that needs to be explained is why Germany started the war. Remember what the position of Germany in the world was—as enviable a position as any nation has ever occupied. The whole world stood at admiration of her wonderful intellectual and material achievements, and all the intellectual men of the world went to school to her. As a university man, I have been surrounded by men trained in Germany, men who had resorted to Germany because nowhere else could they get such thorough and searching training, particularly in the principles of science and the principles that underlie modern material achievements.

Her men of science had made her industries perhaps the most competent industries in the world, and the label "Made in Germany" was a guarantee of good workmanship and of sound material. She had access to all the markets of the world, and every other man who traded in those markets feared Germany because of her effective and almost irresistible competition.

She had a place in the sun. Why was she not satisfied? What more did she want? There was nothing in the world of peace that she did not already have and have in abundance.

We boast of the extraordinary pace of American advancement. We show with pride the statistics of the increase of our industries and of the population of our cities. Well, these statistics did not match the recent statistics of Germany. Her old cities took on youth, grew faster than any American cities ever grew; her old industries opened their eyes and saw a new world and went out for its conquest; and yet the authorities of Germany were not satisfied.

You have one part of the answer to the question why she was not satisfied in her methods of competition. There is no important industry in Germany upon which the Government has not laid its hands to direct it and, when necessity arise, control it.

You have only to ask any man whom you meet who is familiar with the conditions that prevailed before the war in the matter of international competition to find out the methods of competition which the German manufacturers and exporters used under the patronage and support of the Government of Germany. You will find that they were the same sorts of competition that we have tried to prevent by law within our own borders. I they could not sell their goods cheaper than we could sell ours, at a profit to themselves, they could get a subsidy from the Government which made it possible to sell them cheaper anyhow; and the conditions of competition were thus controlled in large measure by the German Government itself.

Dominate Labor of the World.

But that did not satisfy the German Government. All the while there was lying behind its thought, in its dreams of the future, a political control which would enable it in the long run to dominate the labor and the industry of the world. They were not content with success by superior achievement; they wanted success by authority.

I suppose very few of you have thought much about the Berlin-to-Bagdad Railway. The Berlin-to-Bagdad Railway was constructed in order to run the threat of force down the flank of the industrial undertakings of half a dozen other countries, so that when German competition came in it would not be resisted too far—because there was always the possibility of getting German armies into the heart of that country quicker than any other armies could be got there.

Look at the map of Europe now. Germany, in thrusting upon us again and gain the discussion of peace, talks about what? Talks about Belgium, talks about Northern France, talks about Alsace-Lorraine. Well, those are deeply interesting subjects to us and to them, but they are not talking about the heart of the matter.

Take the map and look at it. Germany has absolute control of Austria-Hungary, practical control of the Balkan States, control of Turkey, control of Asia Minor. I saw a map in which the whole thing was printed in appropriate black the other day, and the black stretched all the way from Hamburg to Bagdad—the bulk of the German power inserted into the heart of the world. If it can keep that, she has kept all that her dreams contemplated when the war began. If she can keep that, her power can disturb the world as long as she keeps it, always provided—for I feel bound to put this proviso in—always provided the present influences that control the German Government continue to control it.

I believe that the spirit of freedom can get into the hearts of Germans and find as fine a welcome there as it can find in any other hearts. But the spirit of freedom does not suit the plans of the Pan Germans. Power cannot be used with concentrated force against free peoples if it is used by a free people.

Allusion to Austria-Hungary.

You know how many intimations come to us from one of the Central Powers that it is more anxious for peace than the chief Central Power; and you know that it means that the people in that Central Power know that if the war ends as it stands they will, in effect, themselves be vassals of Germany, notwithstanding that their populations are compounded with all the people of that part of the world, and notwithstanding the fact that they do not wish, in their pride and proper spirit of nationality, to be so absorbed and dominated.

Germany is determined that the political power of the world shall belong to her. There have been such ambitions before. They have been in part realized. But never before have those ambitions been based upon so exact and precise and scientific a plan of domination.

May I not say that it is amazing to me that any group of people should be so ill-informed as to suppose, as some groups in Russia apparently suppose, that any reforms planned in the interest of the people can live in the presence of a Germany powerful enough to undermine or overthrow them by intrigue or force? Any body of free men that compounds with the present German Government is compounding for its own destruction. But that is not the whole of the story. Any man in America, or anywhere else, who supposes that the free industry and enterprise of the world can continue if the Pan German plan is achieved and German power fastened upon the world is as fatuous as the dreamers of Russia.

What I am opposed to is not the feeling of the pacifists, but their stupidity. My heart is with them, but my mind has a contempt for them. I want peace, but I know how to get it, and they do not.

You will notice that I sent a friend of mine, Colonel House, to Europe who is as great a lover of peace as any man in the world; but I did not send him on a peace mission. I sent him to take part in a conference as to how the war was to be won, and he knows, as I know, that that is the way to get peace if you want it for more than a few minutes.

Nobody Must Block the Way.

All of this is a preface to the conference that I referred to with regard to what we are going to do. If we are true friends of freedom—our own or anybody else's—we will see that the power of this country, the productivity of this country, is raised to its absolute maximum and that absolutely nobody is allowed to stand in the way of it.

When I say that nobody is allowed to stand in the way, I don't mean that they shall be prevented by the power of the Government, but by the power of the American spirit. Our duty, if we are to do this great thing and show America to be what we believe her to be, the greatest hope and energy of the world, then we must stand together night and day until the job is finished. While we are fighting for freedom we must see, among other things, that labor is free, and that means a number of interesting things. It means not only that we must do what we have declared our purpose to do, see that the conditions of labor are not rendered more onerous by the war—but also that we shall see to it that the instrumentalities by which the conditions of labor are improved are not blocked or checked. That we must do. That has been the matter about which I have taken pleasure in conferring from time to time with your President, Mr. Gompers. And, if I may be permitted to do so, I want to express my admiration of his patriotic courage, his large vision, and his statesmanlike sense of what is to be done. I like to lay my mind alongside of a mind that knows how to pull in harness. The horses that kick over the traces will have to be put in a corral.

Now to "stand together" means that nobody must interrupt the processes of our energy, if the interruption can possibly be avoided without the absolute invasion of freedom. To put it concretely, that means this: Nobody has a right to stop the processes of labor until all the methods of conciliation and settlement have been exhausted; and I might as well say right here that I am not talking to you alone. You sometimes stop the courses of labor, but there are others who do the same. And I believe that I am speaking of my own experience not only, but of the experience of others, when I say that you are reasonable in a larger number of cases than the capitalists.

Business Must Be Done.

I am not saying these things to them personally yet, because I haven't had a chance. But they have to be said, not in any spirit of criticism, but in order to clear the atmosphere and come down to business, everybody on both sides has got to transact business, and the settlement is never impossible when both sides want to do the square and right thing. Moreover, a settlement is always hard to avoid when the parties can be brought face to face.

I can differ with a man much more radically when he isn't in the room than I can when he is in the room, because then the awkward thing is that he can come back at me and answer what I say. It is always dangerous for a man to have the floor entirely to himself. And therefore we must insist in every instance that the parties come into each other's presence and there discuss the issues between them, and not separately in places which have no communication with each other.

I always like to remind myself of a delightful saying of an Englishman of a past generation, Charles Lamb. He was with a group of friends, and he spoke very harshly of some man who was not present. I ought to say that Lamb stuttered a little bit. And one of his friends said: "Why, Charles, I didn't know that you knew so-and-so?" "Oh," he said, "I don't. I can't hate a man I know."

There is a great deal of human nature, of very pleasant human nature, in that saying. It is hard to hate a man you know. I may admit parenthetically that there are some politicians whose methods I do not at all believe in, but they are jolly good fellows, and if they only would not talk the wrong kind of politics with me, I would love to be with them.

And so it is all along the line in serious matters and things less serious. We are all of the same clay and spirit, and we can get together if we desire to get together. Therefore, my counsel to you is this: Let us show ourselves Americans by showing that we do not want to go off in separate camps or groups by ourselves, but that we want to co-operate with all other classes and all other groups in a common enterprise, which is to release the spirit of the world from bondage.

Manifestations of Mob Spirit.

I would be willing to set that up as the final test of an American. That is the meaning of democracy. I have been very much distressed, my fellow-citizens, by some of the things that have happened recently. The mob spirit is displaying itself here and there in this country. I have no sympathy with what some men are saying, but I have no sympathy with the men that take their punishment into their own hands, and I want to say to every man who does join such a mob that I do not recognize him as worthy of the free institutions of the United States.

There are some organizations in this country whose object is anarchy and the destruction of law, but I would not meet their efforts by making myself a partner in destroying the law, I despise and hate their purposes as much as any man, but I respect the ancient processes of justice, and I would be too proud not to see them done justice, however wrong they are. And so I want to utter my earnest protest against any manifestation of the spirit of lawlessness anywhere or in any cause.

Why, gentlemen, look what it means: We claim to be the greatest democratic people in the world, and democracy means, first of all, that we can govern ourselves. If our men have not self-control, then they are not capable of that great thing which we call democratic government. A man who takes the law into his hands is not the right man to co-operate in any form of development of law and institutions. And some of the processes by which the struggle between capital and labor is carried on are processes that come very near to taking the law into your own hands. I do not mean for a moment to compare them with what I have just been speaking of, but I want you to see that they are mere graduations of the manifestations of the unwillingness to co-operate.

New Instrumentalities.

And the fundamental lesson of the whole situation is that we must not only take common counsel, but that we must yield to and obey common counsel. Not all of the instrumentalities for this are at hand. I am hopeful that in the very near future new instrumentalities may be organized by which we can see to it that various things that are now going on shall not go on. There are various processes of the dilution of labor, and the unnecessary substitution of labor, and bidding in distant markets, and unfairly upsetting the whole competition of labor, which ought not to go on—I mean now on the part of employers—and we must interject into this some instrumentality of co-operation by which the fair thing will be done all around. I am hopeful that some such instrumentalities may be devised, but, whether they are or not, we must use those that we have, and, upon every occasion where it is necessary to have such an instrumentality, originated upon that occasion, if necessary.

And so, my fellow-citizens, the reason that I came away from Washington is that I sometimes get lonely down there. There are so many people in Washington who know things that are not so; and there are so few people in Washington who know anything about what the people of the United States are thinking about, I have to come away to get reminded of the rest of the country; I have to come away and talk to men who are up against the real thing, and say to them, "I am with you if you are with me." And the only test of being with me is not to think about me personally at all, but merely to think of me as the expression for the time being of the power and dignity and hope of the United States.

SUFFRAGIST PICKETS GET ARRESTED AGAIN

SENTENCE ON 41 SUSPENDED

Protesting Delegates of New York Fail to Obtain an Audience with the President.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—Thirty-one militant suffragists, most of whom were among the forty-one arrested last Saturday, repeated their picketing before the White House today and were rearrested. The descent upon the White House was planned as a further protest against what the women describe as "illegal arrests." It followed a hearing at which the forty-one appeared before Judge Mullowney of the Police Court, who suspended sentence. He said he would send for the women if he decided to impose penalties. Only one, Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, wife of the food expert, gave notice of appeal.

There were a few deserters from the Saturday picket brigade. Mrs. Wiley hurried home after being released by the Magistrate and a number of others of the forty-one absented themselves from the second attack. No sooner had some of the women been released by the Police Judge than they returned to their headquarters, Cameron House, and dressed for the assault, which was made at 4:30 o'clock as the crowds from the Government departments filled the streets.

The attack was without its intended purpose, as the leaders were unaware that the President was absent in Buffalo. The police acted quickly and apprehended the banner bearers as fast as they appeared at the main gates of the White House grounds.

Praise and Criticism.

Mrs. Nolan, who is 73 years old, participated in both raids. Leaders at suffrage headquarters were praising her fortitude and criticising some of the forty-one who, for physical reasons, such as headaches, refused to join their companions of last Saturday. Mrs. Sara Moller of Washington furnished bail for the thirty-one pickets, who will be arraigned in a police court.

Nearly all of the women made brief speeches at the hearing before Judge Mullowney, emphasizing that they had not obstructed traffic and had broken no law in their picketing. Some of them from suffrage States insisted that they were voters. Judge Mullowney, after deliberating a long time, said he would technically suspend sentence and send for the women if he decided to impose penalties. Before arriving at this decision he allowed the women to make their speeches.

Mrs. William Kent of California, wife of a member of the Federal Trade Commission, said with great earnestness:

"My conscience is clear. I walked on Saturday afternoon from Cameron House to the further gate of the White House. I obstructed no traffic. I was moving. At the further gate there was no crowd. I held a banner which all might read. The Administration should commend, instead of allowing a prison sentence to be imposed upon, women who hold aloft words which show the utmost devotion to the ideals of political liberty on which our Government is founded."

This explanation was offered by Mrs. Wiley:

"I want to state that we took this action with great consecration of spirit. We took this action with willingness to sacrifice our personal liberty, in order to focus the attention of the nation on the injustice of our disfranchisement, that we might thereby win political liberty for all the women of the country.

Right to Assemble Cited.

"The Constitution says Congress shall not in any way abridge the right of citizens peacefully to assemble and petition. That is exactly what we did. We peacefully assembled, and then proceeded with our petition to the President for the redress of our grievance of disfranchisement. The Constitution does not specify the form of petition. Ours was in the form of a banner. To say that we 'broke the traffic regulations' when we exercised our constitutional right of petition is therefore unconstitutional."

"As a newly enfranchised New York woman," Mrs. Brannan said, "I realize more acutely than ever the limitations of the State referendum method, the fact that we are prisoners in our own State so far as our franchise is concerned. So long as the President refuses to indorse the Federal amendment he proves to his own country and to the whole world that he is an advocate of the unjust discrimination against American women—that he preaches democracy in words but not democratic deeds."

Resolutions urging President Wilson to order the release of the women now in jail for picketing and asking him to recommend to Congress enactment of a Federal suffrage amendment were left at the White House late today by a delegation of New York women. The whole delegation of forty was barred from the White House grounds by the police, but a committee of two was permitted to enter and present the petition to Secretary Forster.

MRS. CATT ASSAILS PICKETS.

Says Women Make Mistake of Using Tactics Unworthy of Cause.

Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, President of the National American Woman Suffrage Association, said yesterday afternoon that the women who were doing the picketing in Washington had made a psychological mistake. None of the women who went to Washington, Mrs. Catt said, were among those who had made records in the past State suffrage campaign.

"The pickets," Mrs. Catt said, "make the psychological mistake of injecting into this stage of the suffrage campaign tactics which are out of accord with it. Every reform, every change of idea in the world passes through three stages—agitation, argument, and surrender. We have passed through the first two stages and entered into the third. The mistake of the pickets is that they have no comprehensive idea of the movement and are trying to work this first stage in the third. We stand on the threshold of final victory, and the only contribution these women make to it is to confuse the public mind."

Officials at the headquarters of the Woman's Party in New York, 13 and 15 East Forty-first Street, were receiving news from the pickets from Washington and making arrangements to get Representatives and Senators to work in having the women treated as political prisoners and to urge the President to use his influence for the passage of the Federal amendment. The Congressmen to whom special appeals will be made will be those in whose districts the different forty-one pickets arrested on Saturday and others already imprisoned live. Senators William M. Calder and James Wadsworth, Jr., will be interviewed.

Mrs. Frederick Hazard, who is Chairman of the Syracuse District of the party, was in New York yesterday and said that many people in the upper part of the State, including those not in sympathy with picketing, were very much incensed at the long sentences and treatment that the pickets were receiving.

Aid for Home Defender's Widow.

Alderman Charles A. McManus said yesterday that he would introduce a resolution at the meeting of the Board of Aldermen today to provide for the relief of the widow and children of Adam Mang, the Home Defense League member, who was killed on Election night by a brick thrown from a roof on West Forty-ninth Street, between Tenth and Eleventh Avenues. There is no provision under law to provide for his wife and children.

GOT PARTY ORDERS TO HELP SUFFRAGE

they so desire, have representation on the Republican County Committee itself, which now is composed of 1,060 men.

The new drive for the adoption by Congress of the Susan B. Anthony amendment for the nation-wide enfranchisement of women will be begun in this city a week from today. Colonel Theodore Roosevelt has accepted an invitation to open the fight with an address, the topic of which will be "The Federal Suffrage Amendment." This will be delivered at the "victory mass meeting" to be held at the Metropolitan Opera House on Tuesday evening of next week under the auspices of the New York State Woman Suffrage Party. The celebration will precede the forty-ninth annual convention of the Woman Suffrage Party, of which Mrs. Norman de R. Whitehouse is Chairman. The convention will open at the Ritz-Carlton a week from tomorrow.

Mrs. Victor Morawetz, who is in charge of the arrangements for the meeting, announced last night that admission would be by ticket only, of which 4,400 would be issued free. The boxes will be sold for $25 in the lower tier, and for $10 in the upper, to swell the campaign fund to be used in the fight for the Federal amendment.

Despite the caution sounded by Miss Mary Garrett Hay, Chairman of the Woman Suffrage City Committee and the first woman to win very generally from her followers the title "boss," the women who were active in the suffrage fight are already beginning to separate along party lines.

Mrs. James Griswold Wentz, President of the Women's Republican Club of the City of New York, announced last night that that organization would meet today at Delmonico's to discuss plans.

"We certainly shall decline, politely but firmly," Mrs. Wentz said, "to become mere auxiliaries of the men's political organizations, although, of course, we shall co-operate with them along party lines in every possible way. The Republican women will undoubtedly establish organizations of their own in every county of the State."

Chairman Koenig has been invited to address the members of the club at their meeting this afternoon. Up to a late hour last night he had not definitely accepted, although Mrs. Wentz made it clear that an invitation from enfranchised women to a politician of the other sex was to be regarded as a command.

Mrs. Wentz said that the Republican women would not let up in their fight for the Federal amendment.

"It is a cruel thing to ask women to go out and wrestle with the individual voter," she said. "We must never rest until Congress puts the Federal amendment through."

The Democratic women in Brooklyn began to organize yesterday for the coming fight to elect a successor to Daniel J. Griffin in the Eighth Congressional District. Congressman Griffin has been elected Sheriff of Kings County and expects to resign his seat in Congress at the end of the year. His successor is to be elected at a special election which Governor Whitman in all likelihood will call for some date in February.

The first organization of women actively to enter the fight is the Women's Democratic Club of Brooklyn, which was formed at a meeting held yesterday afternoon at 7 Graham Avenue. The club will form the central clearing house for the Democratic activities of women in the Borough of Brooklyn and will adopt the same form of organization which the Kings County Democratic Committee has, with leaders in every Assembly district and Captains for every election district. Mrs. Paul A. Katske, a Williamsburg woman prominent in civic work, was made President of the club. Permanent organization is to be effected at a meeting to be held later. One feature of the club's work will be to instruct women aliens how to obtain naturalization papers.

The Women's Democratic Club in Manhattan is making arrangements for a ball to be held in January at Terrace Garden or Tammany Hall for the dual purpose of getting funds to build a permanent clubhouse and affording the women an opportunity for getting acquainted with the new Congressmen who will vote on the Federal amendment. Miss Mary Donnelly is Chairman of the Ball Committee. Among the women prominently identified with the club are Mrs. John S. Crosby, Mrs. Joseph Quinn, Mrs. O'Gorman Stanton, Mrs. Eugene Sullivan, and Mrs. James Moran. Mrs. Charles T. Hirst is President. George Dunellen, Democratic leader of the Tenth Assembly District, has offered his clubhouse to the Ball Committee for its meetings.

In the belief that the enfranchisement of the women will aid the prohibition cause, the Anti-Saloon League intends to try to get the next Legislature to amend the Hill-Wheeler bill providing for local option elections in April so that New York City will be exempted from the so-called "double referendum." As the matter stands now, next April there will be local option elections in all parts of the State except New York City, while here the election will be on the question of whether or not the city shall come under the provisions of the local option law. In trying to put New York City under the local option law by legislative enactment, the Anti-Saloon League is trying to fix things so that it will have one hurdle instead of two to jump. If the temperance cause should lose at the April election, as the law now stands, another election on the issue could not be held for five years.

Inasmuch as the issue would not be as clear cut as one openly for or against liquor, the temperance forces wish to have a straight out-and-out election in the city on prohibition. This wish is especially strong now that the women have the vote, which will add many more than half a million votes for the prohibition cause, in the belief of the officials of the Anti-Saloon League.

With the city under local option, all that would be necessary to hold an election on the prohibition question at any time would be the filing of petitions signed by 25 per cent. of the registered voters. With the women voting the Anti-Saloon League believes there would never be any difficulty about obtaining the requisite number of signers to the petitions.

SOME WOMEN HERE TO BE NONPARTISAN

City Party Is for "Safe and Sane" Campaign for Federal Amendment.

PLAN COURSE FOR WOMEN

Normal School Class for New Voters Will Be Opened at Once and Experts Will Instruct.

There was a large gathering of leaders, captains, and workers of the New York City Woman Suffrage Party, whose head is Mary Garrett Hay, at the headquarters, 3 East Thirty-eighth Street, yesterday. It was the first executive meeting since the election, and the gathering, with cheers and enthusiastic applause, in resolution form, put on record its purpose to remain nonpartisan, join with the National American Woman Suffrage Association in working for the Federal amendment and begin immediately with the education of the women for their duties as citizens.

Emphasis was laid on a "safe and sane" campaign for the amendment. The resolution on this subject read:

> Resolved, That we line up our forces behind the National American Woman Suffrage Association and conduct a safe, sane, and constructive campaign for the Federal amendment;
> Resolved, That to this end, we appoint a Federal Amendment Committee, to be composed of five members, appointed by the boroughs; a Congressional Chairman for each Congressional district throughout the city, and sixty-two leaders of the Assembly districts, these members to work along the quiet, dignified, educational lines followed by the National Association until the Federal amendment is passed by Congress.

With this renewed activity the women will not neglect the work for the war which they have been previously carrying on with vigor.

Miss Hay gave a vigorous and serious talk to her workers. Suggestions of policy which she has made since Election Day were put into definite form for use by her followers.

"The members of the New York City Woman Suffrage Party," she said, "feel that the newly enfranchised women of this city are being watched by the world. For this reason, our women must not make mistakes. Their actions will hurt or help not only the cause of woman suffrage throughout the United States but the woman movement throughout the civilized world. For this reason we believe that we ought to take our first steps slowly and after careful deliberation and that we ought to advise all our voting sisters outside of our organization to be conservative, and wary.

"The members of the New York Woman Suffrage Party feel that we owe our victory not to any one political party, but to all of them. We won votes from the men of all political parties because of the thorough and dignified way in which we conducted our suffrage campaign. We won the vote for the women, and we must help not only our members, but all the women in the city, to become intelligent and good citizens. At present it is absolutely necessary for women to be nonpartisan until we have carefully weighed every phase of political policy and procedure, until we have studied and thought and come to right decisions.

"All women will not vote the same way on any question. We are not concerned at present with any question save that of remaining cool and deliberate and of learning all that we can. We shall have to teach many things to our foreign sisters, shall have to help them to become naturalized and this must keep us occupied for a time. One thing we shall try to do in New York, namely, to support any movement, measure or man that is good for our Government and city, and this irrespective of what party is behind them."

A normal school course for new voters will be opened immediately at the city headquarters. Experts will give instruction and Suffrage Party leaders will attend to prepare themselves to establish similar classes for the women of their districts later. The policies of the different political parties will be explained and bureaus of political education will also be established for the women voters

Resolutions were passed thanking the political parties and voters, President Wilson, and the press, for their aid in getting the vote for the women of New York State. The resolution to the President read:

"Resolved, That the Woman Suffrage Party of the City of New York tenders its appreciation and hearty thanks to the President of the United States for his timely and convincing message to the voters of our State which aided materially in the victory on Nov. 6, 1917."

Mrs. R. Ringrose of San Francisco, who has been in New York for some time working for suffrage, yesterday protested against a statement made by Miss Helen Todd at the meeting of the Women's Committee of One Thousand at Public School 40, on Sunday evening, that the Socialist vote had carried California for woman suffrage.

"Miss Todd was in California only a month," said Mrs. Ringrose, "and is not sufficiently informed to speak for the State. An analysis of the vote in California when the State enfranchised its women showed that the Socialists not only had not given the women the vote, but that many of them had apparently deserted the cause."

HYLAN TO APPOINT WOMEN.

Promises Them Place on School Board—Civil Service Job Likely.

Mayor-elect John F. Hylan expects to give ample recognition to the enfranchised women in his administration. It is likely that he will apoint women not only on the new Board of Education, seven members of which will be named by him under a statute enacted this year, but also on the Municipal Civil Service Commission.

"I certainly shall give women representation on the Board of Education," said Judge Hylan yesterday. "Whether one or more places will be filled by a woman has not been determined, but you may say authoritatively that women will be represented."

Miss May B. Upshaw, a Barnard graduate, who has been employed by the Municipal Civil Service Commission as an examiner for the last two years and who was a contestant for the position of Chief Examiner in a recent competitive examination, is being mentioned as a possible aspirant for a Commissionership if it should be finally decided that in view of the growing political importance of women now that they have been enfranchised in this State, one of the three members of the Commission should be a woman.

The name of Robert H. Mainzer, a wealthy broker who lives at the Ansonia, was menttioned in Tammany circles yesterday as a possible appointee to a Commissionership in the Hylan administration. Mr. Mainzer, it is understood, contributed generously to the campaign fund. The fact that Mr. Mainzer is an enthusiastic "buff" may have led to the conclusion that he is slated for the place at the head of the Fire Department, though it is known that ex-Fire Commissioner Joseph Johnson is a candidate for his old place, with heavy backing among prominent Tammany politicians.

Judge Hylan resumed his seat on the bench yesterday, after several weeks' absence. He sat in Part II. of the Kings County Court. Many of his associates came in and congratulated him on his election. After court Judge Hylan came over to his Manhattan headquarters for a couple of hours. A stern decree has gone out from the Mayor-elect that job hunters must stay away from the County Court House and that no applications which reach him there will be considered.

PLAN STRICTER BAN ON MUNITION WORKS

military transports and other oversea craft, as well as enemy spy activities the purpose of which is to gain information desired by Germany as to the movements of the American Navy and Army transports. The suggestion, which, it was pointed out, would have rendered much less likely the disastrous fire which on Sunday destroyed the Washburn Wire Company's plant at 118th Street and East River, is that a force of 10,000 soldiers, commanded by officers of the regular army, be assigned to the duty of guarding the waterfront of New York. In other words, that the waterfront be made a military zone, instead of, as it is now constituted, a "barred zone" into which the citizens of all nations, save Germany, may enter at will.

It was pointed out yesterday that under the regulations, as they now existed, even Germans could be employed in munition plants so long as those plants were not within a "barred zone" area, while if these Germans procured a Federal permit they could work in such plants even when they were situated in such zones. Thousands of Austrians, Hungarians, Bulgarians, and Turks, a great number of whom are said to be openly hostile to the United States so far as their sympathies in the war are concerned, are employed in munition manufacturing plants and on vessels plying the harbor and rivers of New York. United States Marshal McCarthy said yesterday that it was undoubtedly true that a great many enemy aliens were employed in factories in and about New York which had Government contracts.

If the suggestion that the army be placed in control of the water fronts is approved it will mean the control by soldiers of all enemy alien movements, as well as of all other persons, so far as the water-front zones are concerned.

Want Stricter Regulations.

As at present administered the regulations are such that no Federal official has the right even to question the right of an Austrian, a Turk, or a Bulgarian, all of whom are allies of the Germans, to enter any barred zone in New York City or in any other part of what is known as the metropolitan district. In the opinion of many Federal officials some of the most dangerous spies now operating in this part of the country are Austrian, Bulgarian or Turkish subjects, and they point out that unless the activities of these persons can be controlled it will never be possible to render the New York harbor entirely safe from the espionage activities of enemy aliens and those who are allied with them.

There are no fewer than 600 Austrians in command of barges and lighters operating in New York harbor, and, this being the case, Federal officials say it will be an easy matter for a German spy or agent to keep track of everything that goes on in the harbor or along the waterfronts.

"As the situation now stands," a Federal official said yesterday, "it is absolutely impossible to keep the friends of Germany—I have reference to the subjects of Austria-Hungary, Turkey, and Bulgaria—from going anywhere, at any time, they want to. They have just as much right to make a tour of Hoboken as you or I, and they can take a trip on any passenger-carrying craft that plies the waters of New York, provided they have the price of a ticket. They are permitted to work in munition plants, on docks, in warehouses, and in all other places where the business carried on is of a strictly war nature. Unless they are placed under restriction, the danger of leakage of important information to the Germans will always be with us."

Another man familiar with alien enemy conditions in New York made the statement that the situation here was "full of dynamite," and until it was so treated there would always be danger of such things as Sunday's big fire and the attempts to bomb ships. Two men are under indictment in Brooklyn for the latter offense.

130,000 German Subjects Here.

It was stated yesterday that in the metropolitan district there were about 130,000 German subjects whose ages were above 14 years, and that these persons had blood relations who had taken out citizenship papers to the number of at least 200,000 persons. The Austrians, Hungarians, Bulgarians, and Turks resident in the district would increase the number of hostile foreigners in the New York district to at least 250,000 persons, it was said.

In the event the Government decides to make the New York waterfronts a military zone it will mean that all persons, American citizens included, will have to get passes in order to enter the zone.

Citizens of the United States and of nations allied with them the nature of whose business requires their daily presence along the waterfront would be provided with passes with their photographs attached. It is the opinion of Federal officials that this system would go a long way toward making it almost impossible for an enemy alien, or a suspected subject of Austria or other nations with which Germany is allied, to get within half a mile of the waterfront.

From official sources a reporter of THE TIMES learned yesterday that there was brewing a propaganda which has for its purpose the bringing about of a strike which will, if successful, cripple the harbor carrying traffic of New York. The men who are leaders of this proposed strike are in nearly every instance Austrians or other persons of foreign birth who are unfriendly to the United States.

The same situation exists in other ports in this part of the country, it was said yesterday, particularly such ports as Boston, New London, Philadelphia, and Baltimore. In the South the situation is not so serious, for the reason that there are few foreigners in that part of the country.

Cause of Fire Still a Mystery.

United States Marshal Thomas D. McCarthy said yesterday that the presence of enemy aliens in the plant of the Washburn Wire Company would result in stricter regulations affecting the employment of Germans in factories doing work for the Government. He was not certain yet what these changes would be. Investigations conducted by the Fire Department yesterday resulted in an announcement by Fire Commissioner Adamson and Fire Marshal Brophy last night that the origin of the fire still remained a mystery. The investigations are being continued.

Marshal McCarthy did not make any investigation of the suspicious circumstances of the fire, on the ground that enemy aliens had not been barred from the plant, and that the matter was in the hands of the Fire Department. He admitted that the presence of enemy aliens in the plant was in violation of the President's proclamation, so far as the actual wording went, but said that the proclamation had been administered by him after consultation with the Washington authorities in a way that was considered most efficient. Orders issued by the Marshal have barred enemy aliens from the vicinity of piers, arsenals, armories, and certain Government property. The Marshal said there had never been promulgated in New York an order barring aliens from plants "manufacturing any product for the use of the army and navy." He declared that to do this would be a gigantic task, inasmuch as practically every factory of any size in New York was doing at least some work, directly or indirectly, for the Government.

"Unquestionably," he said, "there are several thousand enemy aliens working in plants in New York City which are doing work for the Government. This may be unfortunate, but we are developing the regulations all the time, and I would not be surprised to see that the Washburn factory fire was followed by new regulations."

The Marshal, in pointing to some of the difficulties of the situation, said that he had never known that the Washburn plant was doing any work for the Government. It was his personal opinion that enemy aliens did not cause the Washburn fire. He said that they would have had eight months to do it, and saw no reason why, if there were any Germans in the factory who wished to destroy it, they had waited until Sunday.

Twenty-four witnesses were examined by Marshal Brophy yesterday. Few of them could speak English, and their examination proceeded slowly. It will be continued today. In the twenty-four men there were ten Austro-Hungarians and four Germans. One German who had been under suspicion was exonerated when it was shown that he left the building two hours before the fire started.

Fire Commissioner Adamson issued this statement last night:

> No cause of the fire has as yet been discovered, nor has any cause been found for the rapid spread of it. The testimony so far indicates that the blaze started in the basement. The fact stands out that men who were not citizens were employed in the plant, among them Germans. It is unnecessary for me or any one else to comment upon the situation where alien enemies work in a plant that is doing Government work.
> One of the most interesting things disclosed by our investigation is that John O'Donnell was engaged in repairing belting in the basement near where the fire was first seen. He said he was out to luncheon at the time the fire started. Usually he has a helper, Henry Schreiber, working with him Sundays in repairing belts. Yesterday Schreiber was sick and did not come to work. In mending the belts O'Donnell used a cement that had to be heated before being applied to the belting. O'Donnell says that this cement was heated on a gas range on the third floor, and that Schreiber usually made frequent trips from the basement to the third floor to heat the cement. He says that yesterday he heated the cement on the range on the third floor. On the other hand, Schreiber says that on last Sunday O'Donnell told him to take a shovel of coals from under the furnace and heat the cement over the shovel. O'Donnell denies that he heated the cement in this way yesterday. That matter will be investigated further by questioning the engineers on duty yesterday.

Commissioner Adamson said that Daniel C. Turner, general manager of the plant, had said that the factory turned out about $2,000,000 worth of work a year, of which about $50,000 was for the Government.

AMOS PINCHOT HEADS A NEW PEACE PARTY

Union Against Militarism Gives Way to One Favoring Settlement Germany Would Like.

The organization known as the American Union against Militarism has gone out of existence, and in its place there has been organized the American Union for a Democratic Peace, of which Amos Pinchot is Chairman, Crystal Eastman Secretary, and the Rev. Dr. Frederick Lynch, Oswald Garrison Villard, J. P. Warbasse, Alexander Tractenberg, James H. Maurer, Max Eastman, and L. H. Wood, Executive Committee members. The organization, it is stated, is out to work for peace, and the kind of peace it advocates is the same kind, according to the announcement made public last night, that the so-called People's Council favors, namely, one without annexations, indemnities, and without economic reprisals following the war. The announcement is full of kind words for Germany.

TELLS OF THWARTING GERMAN PLOTTERS

John R. Rathom Reveals How Reporters Outwitted Teuton Secret Service.

TRAPPED CAPTAIN BOY-ED

Stirs Canadian Club Diners by Inside Story of Activities of German-Americans Here.

An evening of candid, serious discussion of the war kept the largest group ever gathered at a dinner of the Canadian Club clustered about the tables at the Hotel Biltmore until late last night, cheering the term "cohesion," oft applied by the speakers to a program of more intense co-operation among the Allies; listening with close attention as John R. Rathom of The Providence Journal narrated the whole history of German plots in America and told a fascinating modern detective story of how American newspaper reporters had time and again outwitted the costly and elaborate German Secret Service.

The diners gave rousing pledges of better things in the future to Lieutenant Bruno Roselli of the Italian Army when he frankly accused the Allies in general of having left Italy too long unsupported and the United States in particular of having sent the Italian Commission away empty-handed when it came here begging unselfishly for coal and for steel.

A boundary-less America was the theme of other speakers, notably of Melville E. Stone, General Manager of The Associated Press, who paid his respects to "a certain Bolsheviki editor" who, he said, had labored hard to keep the American people from uniting and to whom he passed the direct lie for asserting that this was England's war. Canada, without financial or political obligations, he said, had herself been among the first to prove that it was a war for civilization, and he begged the Canadians in this country to aid in the task of teaching "this country, not yet awake, that this war, though now 3,000 miles away, will be at their door if the Germans win."

Oscar S. Straus told of a medal struck off by the Germans to commemorate the sinking of the Lusitania, which was inscribed upon one side with a pretended American motto, "Business over all." He asserted "we will show her that America is ready to dedicate her last dollar and her last man that she may hand down to her children's children the liberties bequeathed to us by the fathers of the Republic."

Tribute to American Reporters.

Mr. Rathom's recital began with a tribute to the unflinching honesty and the persistent keenness of the American reporters who had fought the long battle against tremendous odds in the form of an organized and elaborately financed German Secret Service in this country. His hearers seemed amazed at times, and at others they laughed and applauded uproariously as the speaker told how again and again the Teutons had been outplayed at their own game and how again and again official denials of spy revelations had been replaced sooner or later by official confirmation of the disclosures. Time and again he tried to sit down, but from all parts of the huge ballroom came cries for more.

The part of his recital that won the greatest applause was the tale of how the Providence Journal got a man into the offices of the Hamburg-American steamship offices in New York City when those offices were teeming with unneutral activities and were guarded with the utmost cunning the Prussian sleuths could devise. He told how the newspaper sent one of its young men to Lima, Ohio, and how from there the reporter wrote to the steamship company, saying he was the son of German parents, true to the Fatherland, and therefore wished to send warning that he had learned the Providence Journal was plotting to put a man into the Hamburg-American offices as janitor.

The reporter said he learned of the plot through a "loyal" telegraph operator in Providence, who heard it from a Providence Journal operator. Within a few days the Hamburg-American offices actually were visited by a man who asked for the job of janitor. He was taken into a private office and there grilled by the head of the company's secret service and other officials. He broke down and confessed he came from the newspaper office, and was thrown out without ceremony.

The youth out in Ohio wrote again a few days later, saying that, having heard nothing, he wanted to apologize for having alarmed the steamship officials needlessly. With "boyish candor," he added that he wanted to come to New York to make his fortune, and wondered if the line appreciated his attempt to help the Fatherland sufficiently to give him a temporary job.

The Hamburg-American wired back for him to come at once, Mr. Rathom said, and when he arrived they gave him the very job of janitor, which he had warned would be sought by a Providence Journal man. He stayed there six months, and the newspaper got evidence which Mr. Rathom said "would have closed those offices long, long ago instead of only recently had we had the power that the Government has."

Outwitted Captain Boy-Ed.

"One of our employes, said Mr. Rathom, "a young woman who had worked for our paper for six years, marked one of the packing cases sent by Boy-Ed to his home Government before the outbreak of the war with this country, with two hearts, and Boy-Ed, in amorous mood, drew two darts through the drawings. These packing cases were filled with important documents and receipts showing the payment of money by the German propaganda in America. Many of these operations may appear inconceivable, but our proof was indisputable.

"On another occasion Boy-Ed and two men who were responsible for the blowing up of a plant in Wilmington, Del., drank wine with our representative and gloated over the work they had carried on in a country not at war with Germany.

"Going back a little bit," continued Mr. Rathom, "our man in the German Consul General's office in San Francisco found that the man was plotting against this Government. That official is now serving two years' imprisonment in San Francisco. In this connection I will state that the present Minister from Sweden, still serving in his official capacity in Washington, has been acting as an emissary for the German propaganda.

"We had positive proof of the breaking up of the machinery of the German liners docked at Hoboken, and when this proof was printed Dudley Field Malone, then Collector of the Port, denied the story," Mr. Rathom said, and when he, Rathom, interviewed the Collector the latter explained he hadn't examined below decks, as he didn't think he had authority to do so. "I asked him if he thought the engines were in the smokestack," Mr. Rathom added, "and I suppose he found out they weren't when the Government ten days later confirmed our entire story."

Have the German Agents Changed?

In leading up to his account of The Providence Journal's exposure of Teuton plottting, Mr. Rathom said:

"Is it conceivable to imagine that the hundreds of thousands of Germans and traitorous German-Americans who cheerfully aided Ambassador Bernstorff's campaign of murder and destruction in this country for two years and a half have changed their spots? How many lessons do we need to make us realize that the danger here at home from these same people today is as great as any other danger that we are facing in connection with this war?

"Is the lesson of the Baltimore fire two weeks ago to go unlearned? Is the lesson of the destruction of the Washburn plant last night to go unheeded? The sympathetic and kindly attitude of those in authority, who prefer not to intern spies, who prefer not to shoot traitors, is rapidly creating a condition which, if permitted to continue, will mean the maintenance in the very heart of our civil and commercial life of a danger that will destroy half of our war value to ourselves and the Allies.

"Why are thousands of skilled German sailors—provided with ample funds, regularly supplied to them by German bankers and German steamship managers in New York City, sailors highly skilled in mechanical, electrical, and engineering work, filled with the desire to see Germany win this war and determined to do everything they can in this country to help Germany win the war—permitted to roam throughout the length and depth of the United States unhampered, being checked only by the ridiculous form known as a 'license'?

"The Secret Service of the United States and the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice—the two official weapons, and the only two, which stand between our people and disaster at home—are ridiculously undermanned and ridiculously underpaid. The loyalty and intelligence of these man are beyond question. The lack of facilities for their work and for the scope of their work is a national disgrace.

"The entire sum paid by the United States to maintain these two vitally important bureaus per annum is actually less than the amount of money paid by Ambassador Bernstorff per month for German Secret Service operations in the City of New York alone. The financial loss entailed by the Baltimore fire is probably four times the entire annual cost of both of these bureaus.

"What terrible calamity must we go through, what immense destruction of war materials vital to our future freedom must we see before we deal with this question with a stern and unyielding hand and with a determination to stamp out treachery wherever it shows its head?

"Is there any connection between this timidity of inaction against murderers and the constantly repeated doctrine of the bad German Kaiser and the good German people? No more vicious misstatement of fact is possible than this one. The sooner we learn that the Kaiser in this war is the mouthpiece of his subjects, and that in all his reign there never was a time when he was so popular in Germany as he is today, the sooner we will be able to think straight and act straight on this situation. The Kaiser is the physical embodiment of the German idea, and the German idea is the doctrine of physical force.

"And yet there are those who persist in telling us that we are playing the rôle in this war of the great liberator of the German people! It is our hand that is to help them up toward the light in their struggles to rid themselves of their Kaiser and his hated system. And that hand is held out across the Atlantic, the Atlantic in whose depths lie the bones of American women and children murdered by Germany's Kaiser and by the poor, struggling German people, who greeted those murderers with shouts of ecstatic joy!

War No Fight for a Trophy.

"What are we fighting for? A trophy? The head of the Kaiser? It sounds like that when we read the speeches which are sometimes prepared for our consumption. We get the impression that if by some particularly lucky stroke an American returns home with the head of the Kaiser the war would be satisfactorily over and we should be hailed as the savior by the liberated German people.

"But nations do not fight for a trophy. Not even for the head of the Kaiser! There are three things for which nations and men fight in war—for the love of something, for the hate of something, and for or against one of the religious fanaticisms that have made the world run red since the beginning of history.

"This war has already been worth a thousand times more than it has cost in life and suffering and treasure. It has saved Great Britain from forces that were leading her to destruction, and has made her a straight flame of purity, her dross burned away. It has given back to France her religion, has reinvigorated and regenerated her national life and has washed her clean. It will in the end save Germany, after she has toiled through generations of shame into the light of day.

"This is a spiritual war. Not a war of beautiful speeches and poetic declarations; not a war of fighting by proxy or vicarious suffering. Will the United States come out of it with a national soul or only with a national purse?"

Lieutenant Roselli's indictment of the allied powers for failing to support Italy until "three months too late" was delivered earnestly, but without heat, and it held the closest attention of his hearers. Lieutenant Roselli was an American college professor until his native Italy entered the war, when he hurried to the colors. He has only recently returned from the scene of Italy's radical retreat.

James Edward Cattell urged that America participate in the war in a spirit of complete self-sacrifice. Thomas D. Neelands, President of the club, presided.

NORTHCLIFFE IN ENGLAND.

Paying a Brief Visit Before Returning Here for Christmas.

LONDON, Nov. 12.—Lord Northcliffe, Sir Charles Gordon, Lieut. Col. Campbell Stuart, and other members of the British War Mission to the United States have arrived in London and will remain here during the meetings of the inter-allied conference. Lord Northcliffe declined to make a statement until he had reported to Premier Lloyd George. He expressed enthusiasm, however, with the rapid progress of American aircraft construction.

Announcement was made here yesterday that Lord Northcliffe, Chairman of the British War Mission in the United States, had arrived safely in England with Lord Reading, who came to Washington recently on a financial mission for his Government. Lord Northcliffe announced early in October his intention of going to London for a brief visit. He expects to return to America shortly before Christmas, which he intends to celebrate after the Dickens manner at Pelham. He left New York a little more than a week ago, accompanied by his secretary, Hamilton Fyffe. The party, including Lord Reading, crossed the Atlantic on a fast British cruiser.

Foreign Owners Asked to Show Right to Hold Millions in Products.

NO OATS FOR GERMANS

2,000,000 Bushels Held in Storage for Dutch Importers Believed to be for Kaiser's Cavalry.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—The millions of dollars worth of foodstuffs discovered by Secret Service agents in New York warehouses will be put on the American market unless the foreign owners can show that they are entitled to the products and that no embargo against their exportation is in effect.

The Food Administration has opened negotiations by cable with the foreign owners in the hope of obtaining their permission for the purchase of the foodstuffs, but other action will be taken unless the permission is forthcoming. Officials were interested today in the fact that the foodstuffs include more than 2,000,000 bushels of oats consigned to Dutch importers. It was pointed out that Holland is not ordinarily a user of oats, but Germany has been short of oats for her cavalry.

Activities of the Secret Serive agents in New York were said to be only a part of an investigation throughout the United States to discover if large quantities of foodstuffs are being held in storage.

The Dutch commercial mission, with headquarters here, issued a statement disclaiming that any of the supplies belonged to the Netherlands.

"In the first place," said the mission, "there are no secret stores of foods and feed bought by the Dutch agents in this country. None of such materials, were they exported to Holland, could possibly be exported to any belligerent country on account of the Dutch laws prohibiting such exportation. For a long time the Holland Government Commission has supplied the War Trade Board with a complete statement showing all foods and feed owned by Dutch interests in the United States, loaded in ships as well as in storage. The results of investigations, secret or otherwise, if deemed necessary are confidently looked forward to by the Holland Government Commission. The report to the effect that a representative of the Dutch Government said that he would rather see all the cargoes rot in the holds of the vessels before having them removed, is entirely devoid of truth."

BOSTON, Nov. 12.—There is no hoarding of foodstuffs in Massachusetts, according to a statement issued here today by Henry B. Endicott, the Food Administrator. The statement is based on reports from 1,500 out of 1,800 dealers in food commodities who use storage warehouses.

With the co-operation of dealers the Food Administration has instituted a special report system which enables Mr. Endicott to know how much food is in storage from day to day, and thereby prevent hoarding.

FIND ANOTHER MILLION IN EGGS STORED AWAY

Federal Food Commissioner Says Food Hoarders Will Feel Whole Weight of Law.

It became known last night that another $1,000,000 worth of eggs, held in storage here and which have not been reported to the Government as required law, had been located by the Secret Service, which increased the total value of the eggs located by the Government agents to $4,294,434, and brought the total value of all the foodstuffs located to about $40,000,000. With the value of the cotton, jute, oils, and various metals which have been located by the Secret Service added, this means that the Secret Service disclosures involve goods valued at more than $76,000,000.

Arthur Williams, New York City representative of the United States Food Administration, said that the work of Chief Flynn and his agents was done at the request of Mr. Hoover. "The man who hoards food," said Mr. Williams, "should be treated as an enemy of the United States. Food hoarding is a national offense.

"It has been said that there are people in this country who are hoarding food for the purpose of aiding Germany. I do not know the facts in the case, but I believe the reports are true. The present situation indicates what Mr. Hoover is doing for the people. Mr. Hoover has no use for the speculators and he is determined that they may just as well submit to a loss of profit, because after a while they will incur an even greater loss.

"There are two classes of people who are responsible for the present food shortage crisis—one is the man anxious to make difficult the feeding of our allies, the man who may be handling part of the German funds to purchase food for the enemy here, and the other is the man holding back the food stuffs for higher profits.

"If it is found anyone is aiding the enemy the whole power of the United States Food Administration shall fall down upon him."

HOTEL MEN BACK HOOVER.

Food Conservation Is Keynote of Their National Convention.

The hotel men of the United States who have assembled here to attend the annual convention of the Hotel Association of this State and the National Hotel Men's Exposition in the Grand Central Palace, pledged themselves yesterday to stand behind the National Food Administration in conserving the food of the nation. The convention has brought together hundreds of hotel men and before the session ends on Saturday it is expected that at least 10,000 men interested in the hotel industry will be in this city.

In opening the exposition Edward M. Tierney, Chairman of the Exposition Committee, touched upon the changes that have come within a year to this country.

"Tonight," he said, "we stand with heads uncovered in reverential awe of the powers of might that dictate the things we should do to uphold the United States in its struggle to drive the Moloch of tyranny and inhumanity from the face of the earth. We can best serve our country by opening up the avenues of thrift and economy to the greatest number of our citizens in order that unnecessary waste and destruction of food supplies be stopped."

W. N. Robinson, President of the American Hotel Association of the United States and Canada, also spoke on the necessity of food conservation.

In the afternoon the delegates were entertained at luncheon by George C. Brown, proprietor of the Park Avenue Hotel. Speeches were made by Mr. Brown, Mr. Tierney, John McGlynn, President of the New York State Hotel Association, and Oscar Tschirky of the Waldorf. The wives of the delegates were entertained at a luncheon at the Hotel Biltmore by John McE. Bowman.

The Second National Exposition covers more than 97,000 square feet of floor space in the Grand Central Palace. More than 300 manufacturing concerns have on exhibition every device that goes into the conduct of a hotel or restaurant. All have, almost without exception, devoted some space to showing those appliances that conserve food and keep down kitchen expense.

SAYS ECONOMY ALONE WILL WIN THIS WAR

Sir Stephenson Kent Declares We Must Save in Man Power, Food, and Raw Materials.

Sir Stephenson Kent, head of the British Commission on Munitions, at a luncheon tendered the commission by the New York State Chamber of Commerce yesterday, criticised any talk of peace as untimely, and asserted that inasmuch as we "were in for a long war" we should be applying ourselves rather to the necessity of conducting the fighting economically and efficiently to a successful conclusion.

"To win this war," he said, "we have got to economize in every conceivable way. We have got to economize in food, in raw materials, and in man power. I was saying at lunch that a system that exists in this country, and that did exist in my country, that of cost plus profit, to my mind is a very vicious system. It leads to the negation of economy and to the most uneconomical use of man power imaginable, and it is a direct inspiration for two men doing one man's job. I do want to emphasize that the economy of man power is absolutely vital. The waste of man power is a crime. The waste of skill is a crime. It is a crime if it is perpetrated by the army or by the employer in the factory. Our endeavor in England under that system of dilution is to see that every skilled mechanic in the country is employed to the uttermost of his skill, that he is never allowed to do a job that a less skilled man could do.

"My nation, and your nation, too, will suffer, as my nation has suffered and is suffering, from an insufficiency of that skill. You will not have enough highly skilled mechanics. You will have to bring women to do work that you don't want women to do, but it is the necessity of war that you have to make use of women and of men, or whatever is necessary to pull you through this very long job that we have in front of us."

E. H. Outerbridge, President of the Chamber of Commerce, welcomed the commission and congratulated the members for the information they had brought to American manufacturers. Among those present were H. W. Garrod, G. H. Baillie, Captain Cyril Asquith, members of the British commission; Robert Adamson, General Charles H. Sherrill, Byron H. Newton, George N. Bell, Charles F. Rand, Rev. Percy Stickney Grant, Philip J. McCook, Hamilton Owens, Curtice H. Hitchcock, Lindsay Russell, Welding Ring, Henry A. Caesar, Darwin P. Kingsley, Charles L. Bernheimer, Major Howard C. Smith, Alfred E. Marling, A. Barton Hepburn, and John I. Waterbury. The commission will hold three conferences at the Merchants' Association today, and in the evening will attend a dinner given by the United Engineering Societies at 29 West Thirty-ninth Street.

Other foods, the allowance of which is the same for all, are apportioned as follows:

PROCLAIMS LICENSE RULES FOR BAKERS

President Formally Announces Control Will Be Taken by Hoover on Dec. 10.

COVERS HOTELS AND CLUBS

Food Administrator Will at Once Draft Regulations—Housewives Asked to Follow Rules.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—President Wilson's proclamation, putting the baking industry under license, was made public today, and steps were taken by the Food Administration to organze machinery by which the regulations will be enforced.

All bakeries, consuming ten barrels of flour or more a month, will be brought under these regulations on Dec. 10, and are requested to apply for information so that they may adjust plants to the use of the standard weights and formula adopted for "war bread."

The proclamation covers the baking of cake, crackers, biscuits, pastry, and other products, and apply not only to bakers but also to hotels, restaurants, and clubs where bread or other products of their own baking are served.

Heads of households who do home baking, are called upon by the Food Administration to watch carefully the formulas and other instructions issued from time to time and co-operate voluntarily.

The President's proclamation is as follows:

(LICENSING BAKERS.)
BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.
A PROCLAMATION.

Whereas, Under and by virtue of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to Provide for the National Security and Defense by Encouraging the Production, Conserving the Supply, and Controlling the Distribution of Food Products and Fuel," approved by the President on the 10th day of August, 1917, it is provided among other things as follows:

That, by reason of the existence of a state of war, it is essential to the national security and defense, for the successful prosecution of the war, and for the support and maintenance of the army and navy, to assure an adequate supply and equitable distribution, and to facilitate the movement of foods, feeds, fuel, including fuel oil and natural gas, and fertilizer and fertilizer ingredients, tools, utensils, implements, machinery and equipment required for the actual production of foods, feeds, and fuel, hereafter in this act called necessaries; to prevent, locally or generally, scarcity, monopolization, hoarding, injurious speculation, manipulations, and private controls, affecting such supply, distribution, and movement, and to establish and maintain governmental control of such necessaries during the war. For such purposes the instrumentalities, means, methods, powers, authorities, duties, obligations, and prohibition hereinafter set forth are created, established, conferred, and prescribed. The President is authorized to make such regulations and to issue such orders as are essential effectively to carry out the provisions of the act.

And, Whereas, It is further provided in said act as follows:

That, from time to time, whenever the President shall find it essential to license the importation, manufacture, storage, mining, or distribution of any necessaries, in order to carry into effect any of the purposes of this act, and shall publicly announce, no person shall, after a date fixed in the announcement, engage in or carry on any such business specified in the announcement of importation, manufacture, storage, mining, or distribution of any necessaries as set forth in such announcement, unless he shall secure and hold a license issued pursuant to this section. The President is authorized to issue such and to prescribe regulations for the issuance of licenses and requirements for systems of accounts and auditing of accounts to be kept by licenses, submission of reports by them, with or without oath or affirmation, and the entry and inspection by the President's duly authorized agents of the places of business of licenses.

And, Whereas, It is essential, in order to carry into effect the provisions of the said act, that the powers conferred upon the President by said act be at this time exercised, to the extent hereinafter set forth,

Now, therefore, I, Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States of America, by virtue of the powers conferred upon me by said act of Congress, hereby find and determine and by this proclamation do announce that it is essential, in order to carry into effect the purposes of said act, to license the manufacture of necessaries to the extent hereinafter specified.

All persons, firms, corporations, and associations, who manufacture for sale bread in any form, cake, crackers, biscuits, pastry, or other bakery products, (excepting, however, those whose consumption of any flour and meal in the manufacture of such products is, in the aggregate, less than ten barrels a month,) are hereby required to procure a license on or before Dec. 10, 1917. This includes hotels, restaurants, other public eating places, and clubs, who serve bread or other bakery products of their own baking.

Application for license must be made to the United States Food Administration, Washington, D. C., Law Department, License Division, on forms prepared by it for that purpose, which may be obtained on request.

Any person, firm, corporation, or association, other than those hereinbefore excepted, who shall engage in or carry on any business hereinbefore specified after Dec. 10, 1917, without first procuring such license, will be liable to the penalty prescribed by said act of Congress.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done in the District of Columbia, this seventh day of November, in the year of our Lord, one thousand nine hundred and seventeen, and of the independence of the United States of America, the one hundred and forty-second. WOODROW WILSON.

By the President:

ROBERT LANSING,
Secretary of State.

To emphasize the need of the American public co-operating in efforts to conserve food the Food Administration today made public an appeal by W. J. Hanna, Food Controller of Canada. In part he said in his message to Canadians:

"Reports of the crops of France and Italy show that we shall be called upon to strain every effort and to conserve every ounce of food to make up the shortage of our allies. Temporary disaster has overtaken the Italian Army, and it will be necessary to support to the utmost by rushing food shipments. The requirements of Great Britain will be much larger than they were last year. We must also insure the women and children of France against terrible suffering and make certain that the allied cause will not be weakened by shortage of essential food supplies.

"The situation is grave today, and the time has come when the people must realize that the Allies are depending on the Continent of North America to a far greater extent than ever before. It is within the power of all of us effectively to support the efforts of our armies."

ASK HOOVER TO GIVE HIDDEN FOOD FACTS

Merchants' Association Sends a Telegram to Washington Assailing 'Sensational' Reports.

The Merchants' Association of this city sent this telegram to Food Administrator Herbert C. Hoover in Washington yesterday:

"In response to numerous protests received today and representing membership of over 5,000 representative merchants and corporations we request your immediate co-operation toward minimizing evil effects of sensational articles appearing in daily papers today, apparently emanating from Government sources reporting discovery of '$74,000,000 Secret Hoard of Food and Supplies in Warehouses Here.' For details see Monday morning's New York papers.

"Our understanding is that semimonthly reports of the amount of foodstuffs in storage throughout the country are made to your department. We request that your statistical department telegraph us what proportion of each of the principal items has been previously and properly reported to the Government, and what proportion has been secretly held as alleged and has been discovered by the Secret Service agents.

"Also what proportion of each article is properly and normally held in storage or warehouses here to meet the daily consumption of approximately 9,000,000 of inhabitants in the city and adjacent tributary territory, and other legitimate normal demands, such as awaiting steamship space for Europe. Also any other information which will assist in giving the public the correct understanding of the real facts.

"The Merchants' Association desires to co-operate with national, State, and municipal authorities in every reasonable way to assist in minimizing waste, securing economical distribution, and obtaining co-operation of the public and also to prevent profiteering. The Merchants' Association, however, protests vigorously against sensational articles which are essentially misleading and which inflame the ultimate consumers to the detriment of all concerned, including themselves.

"We strongly urge that the National Food Administration arrange to secure the co-operation of the press throughout the country, pledging that no sensational articles regarding food or food supplies will be published unless approved in advance by the National Food Administration or its representatives in the respective States."

One of the officials directly responsible for the estimate of the food hidden here said last night when the Merchants' Association telegram was brought to his attention that the figures supplied to Washington were separate and distinct from those reported regularly to the Agricultural Department and that the supplies listed were, as stated, actually "hidden supplies."

GIFFORD PINCHOT RESIGNS.

Disagrees with Live Stock Division of the Food Board.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—Gifford Pinchot and Edward C. Lasater, who were with the Live Stock Division of the Food Administration, have dropped their official duties because they differed with some of the policies adopted. Mr. Lasater, a live stock producer of Falfurrias, Texas, sent in his resignation today, and it was learned at the same time that Mr. Pinchot resigned more than a week ago.

Mr. Lasater objected to the policy adopted in putting an end to practices of about thirty mills in the South which, he alleged, had been exploiting the purchasers of feed. He also said that his advice for the immediate seizure of cottonseed cake had not been followed. The situation has been receiving the attention of the Food Administration.

EXPECT TO ENROLL 4 OF EVERY 5 CALLED

New Draft Rules, Now off the Press, Will Simplify Work of the Exemption Boards.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—Copies of the new army draft regulations came off the press today for a final reading preparatory to mailing to the local exemption boards throughout the country. They will be in the hands of all boards next week.

Under the new plan the burden of supplying information which will result in his being placed in his proper classification under the selective service law rests squarely upon the registrant. All instructions now in the hands of the boards will be annulled upon the receipt of the new regulations, which are greatly reduced in extent and simplified in process.

The questionnaire process will eliminate from consideration for military service probably 95 per cent. of the men who would have been discharged or exempted under the old plan. Under the first call the average board was compelled to examine five men to obtain one for service. In some cases not more than one out of ten or twelve was sent to the camps.

It is expected that under the new scheme the average figures will be reversed and at most not more than one man in five called up will fail to pass his physical examination and be rejected.

"The American Bar Association and the American Medical Association are now at work organizing the lawyers and doctors to aid registrants in their vicinity in filling out their questionnaires. With the aid of these associations it is hoped a high percentage of the questionnaires will come back in such form that the boards will have little more than a rubber stamp proceeding left to select the men to fill any call.

To Build Up, To Brace Up, To Tone Up

If your general health is not as good as it should be, begin today a course of Pepto-Mangan.

Have you suffered loss of appetite and weight? Is your sleep dream-disturbed and unrefreshing? Do you lack the energy to work well and to play well? Are you nervous? Is your color bad, and have you many "off-days"? These (in the absence of some organic disease) are some of the indications of weak, watery blood, poor in iron and red cells.

Gude's Pepto-Mangan

"The Red Blood Builder"

Every organ of your body—heart, lungs, brain, kidneys, liver, stomach—draws its power to perform from the blood; if the fuel is scant and weak, the engine cannot run well.

Pepto-Mangan builds, braces and tones you up because it strengthens the very source of life and strength. It charges the blood with iron. It creates thousands of new, rich, red blood cells.

The reinfored blood, glad in its new vigor, courses through all the body, scours out the poisons and waste tissues, which are usually responsible for the constant half-sick condition, and paves the way for the easy return of good health.

Because it restores the health by enriching the blood and thus builds on a scientific foundation, Pepto-Mangan is a valuable tonic for the anemic, the run down and overworked, the invalid, the convalescent, the pale, puny child, and the aged. It will agree with the most delicate stomach.

Friendly Warning:

The confidence of the medical profession and the friendship of the millions it has helped during the quarter century of its existence, has caused many counterfeits to be foisted upon the unsuspecting. Gude's is the one genuine Pepto-Mangan. It is sold by all druggists only in the form pictured in this advertisement—never in bulk. Read the circular around the bottle.

Can You Talk into the Telephone?

Then You Can Dictate to The Dictaphone

Lift the receiver off the hook, like any telephone receiver. Press the lever with your thumb, and talk like you talk over the phone—moderately, distinctly, directly into the receiver. When you're through dictating, simply hang up.

From that point on, The Dictaphone operator takes care of your correspondence. You only sign the completed letters.

The Dictaphone System gives you the letters, ready to sign, much earlier in the day than when each letter was written twice—once in shorthand, again on the typewriter.

For every girl—transcribing direct from cylinder to typewriter—produces at least 50 per cent more letters each day. Better letters, too—an exact transcription of your very words. Cheaper letters—one-third less cost.

Again, the every-minute convenience of The Dictaphone can't be over-emphasized. You can use it during the lunch hour, or at any time of the day or night just like the telephone.

There are thousands of users of The Dictaphone right in your own city. We're sure that you'll become a user, too, after you have had a demonstration in your office on your work.

TEUTONS MAKE GIRLS WORK FOR THE ARMY

Government Admits Often-Denied Reports of Deportations from Alsace-Lorraine.

WILL RELEASE ALL UNDER 17

Admission Brought Out Through Communication from This Government Concerning Complaints.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—Confirmation has been given by the German Government itself to the often-denied reports current for the last year that young girls of Alsace-Lorraine have been carried away from their homes and forced to labor for the German army.

From Switzerland today there came a cable report of the reply made by the German Under Secretary for War to a complaint of an Alsatian Deputy in the Reichstag against mistreatment of these young girls. This Government's reply took the form of an official communique, which in substance stated that the army administration had taken measures to assure the girls requisitioned in Alsace-Lorraine and actively employed in work at the front the benefits of moral and religious supervision.

Only 8¼ per cent. of the girls were less than 17 years old, the Deputy was assured, and scarcely one-half of them had been subjected by force to the work at the front.

The German Government, the reply set forth, wishing to meet the desires of the Alsatian population, had issued an order that young girls less than 17 years, who had been enrolled by force, should be liberated at once.

GAS AND SHRAPNEL POURED ON OUR FORCES

Pershing's Men Obliged to Don Masks—Vigorous Fire Kept Up by Both Sides.

By The Associated Press.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Nov. 12.—The American infantrymen in the trenches and artillerists in the gun pits have had their first real experience with gas shells.

The Germans have let loose many during the last two days, making the use of gas masks necessary. Shrapnel has also been freely used by both sides.

During a recent night German machine guns were again turned on the American trenches, the Americans replying with an equally vigorous fire.

PERSHING SEEKS INSURANCE

Applies for $10,000 Policy Under Federal War Risk Plan.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—Commissioner of Insurance William C. Delanoy announced today that he had received an application from Major General Pershing, commanding the American Forces in France, for a policy for $10,000 of war risk insurance. Commissioner Delanoy states that our men in General Pershing's command have shown an accelerated interest in the war risk plan of insurance within the last few days and the applications are coming in now in larger numbers.

All reports indicate that the soldiers at the front are enthusiastic about the opportunity for life insurance and are proud of their Government, which in this provision for the soldier in case of disability and for his dependent family has done something hitherto unknown in the history of wars. The total amount of army and navy life insurance now issued is $2,200,000.

General Pershing, in cabling for insurance on his life, added the following commendation of the plan:

"The army in France is pleased at the announcement that the Soldiers and Sailors' Insurance bill is now a law. By this act our Government has given its soldiers a privilege which no other country has ever granted. The very low rate and other advantages of this insurance are so manifest that it is hoped that every man in the army who needs insurance for those dependent upon him will avail himself of this generous offer. I have made application for insurance myself."

Patrol Boat Ashore in Home Waters

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—The Navy Department was notified today that a naval patrol boat had gone ashore in home waters. So far as reported, no one was injured. Efforts to float the vessel were begun at once.

SEES WAR UNTIL 1920 UNLESS SPEEDED UP

British Minister of National Service Calls for Mightiest Effort in Nation's History.

PLYMOUTH, England, Nov. 12.—Sir Auckland C. Geddes, Minister of National Service, in a speech here today said the people must prepare for a sterner trial than any that had yet been faced. The war, he predicted, would drift into 1920 and after, if the people did not pull themselves together for the mightiest effort in the nation's history.

Victory, said Sir Auckland, depended upon a great uprush of human energy, generated by the people in their determination to win. The Government should not be asked to drive them.

To maintain armies in the field, the speaker concluded, it would be necessary to make further heavy calls on the manhood of the country. All physically fit men previously exempted were required for service unless they were employed in connection with munitions, shipping, agriculture, or other vital industries.

GOLD STAR AS MOURNING.

Chicago Movement to Abolish Black Garb for Death of Soldiers.

CHICAGO, Nov. 12.—A movement was begun here today for the substitution for the black garb of mourning of some designation, such, for instance, as a gold star, in memory of American soldier dead.

According to Mrs. Louise De Koven Bowen, Chairman of the Woman's Committee of the State Council of Defense, the glory of the death should be emphasized rather than its sadness. "The phychological effect of multitudes in mourning is not good. Soldiers do not like it and Germany forbids it," said Mrs. Bowen. "It is not too early to consider this subject now."

American Casualties in Flanders.

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 12.—Among the American casualties with the Canadian forces in France, reported today, were these: Killed in action: T. P. Heban, Framingham, Mass.; gassed: W. H. Taylor, Libby, Mont.; wounded and gassed: H. J. Calle, Gouverneur, N. Y.; Damase Fournier, Natick, R. I.; wounded: Sergeant Major E. G. Watson, Ortonville, Minn.; W. A. Miller, Cheyenne, Wyo.; William Cassidy, Derby Centre, Vt.; James Murray, Charleston, Mass.; Thomas Stanley, Batavia, N. Y.; Corporal D. L. Hager, Kennebunkport, Me.; Austin Crosby, Latchfield, Me.; A. G. Williamson, Newport, Vt.

Income and Expenditure

They are "bad friends" just now.

It's important that they be reconciled.

This is today's dominant thought, as important a one to the capitalist as to the humblest wage-earner. Perhaps, indeed, more so to the former than to the latter.

There's one institution in New York where you can purchase EVERYTHING you need for your home, for your person and for the members of your family at less cost than you can elsewhere,—and that, if you please, without sacrificing anything in the matter of quality.

THAT IS SPELT IN ONE WORD. The signature to this timely notice.

CONVERTED TO WAR BY GERMAN CRUELTY

The Rev. Dr. Johnstone Tells Presbyterian Conference Why He Forsook Pacifism.

REJECTED BRYCE REPORT

But Now, He Says, "We're in the Work of Clearing Out a Jungle of Beasts."

A dramatic confession of conversion to full faith in the holiness of the allied purpose in the war by a Montreal clergyman, who told how indisputable evidence of revolting German cruelty had forced him to abandon pacifist doctrines, stirred to its depths yesterday afternoon a joint war conference of the Presbyteries of New York, Brooklyn, Newark, N. J., and Nassau County. His voice breaking with emotion, his manner agitated as he paced the floor and cried out that the things he had learned had seared his brain forever, the Rev. Dr. Robert G. Johnstone told how he had rejected the Bryce report of Prussian atrocities as incredible and how he had remained "lukewarm" despite all pleadings till "last night I heard from the lips of one who knows better than any one else in this country just what the Germans had done, and now I know that we are not traitors to our country, but to Jesus Christ our Lord, if we are not in this thing to wipe out the Christless philosophy and the Christless religion of our enemies."

Dr. Johnstone's gaunt frame shook and his gray hair was tossed about as he walked up and spoke directly to one minister and then another, while his audience answered him with cries of "Amen!" and "God be praised!"

"I want to tell you men," he continued, "that we're in the work of clearing out a jungle of beasts in the centre of Europe, and I wish to say to you now"—the clergyman uplifted his two hands as if in prayer—"that if Germany wins this war I pray God my wife may die before those loathsome beasts set foot on the soil of this country."

The preacher, his voice still vibrant with emotion, shocked the gathering with a story of German cruelty to a woman in the throes of childbirth and to her husband, a story which ended with the murder of the couple and of the infant, and then he said:

"I said before, 'It isn't true, Bryce or no Bryce,' but now I say I would I could get away from these awful things. My whole being is stirred, and I was kept awake all night. I have preached that we keep free from anger and bitterness and condemnation; now I preach that we have got to win, for if a philosophy of force is to win out in this war, then the very throne of God will totter. Christianity has got to be saved from this awful wreckage, and Christianity will win out only when we teach them that their philosophy, which has made of Europe a shambles, shall not prevail."

The Moderator of the meeting, Dr. Holland G. Mendenhall, told Dr. Johnstone solemnly as he sat down: "Brother, we are with you with all our hearts," and the clergymen and laymen present in the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church nodded and clapped and uttered fervent amens.

Dr. Johnstone's address, almost the last to be delivered, struck the high note in an afternoon of devotional consecration to the prosecution of the war, and to the co-ordination of all Presbyterian energies directed to that end, and to the collateral one of looking after the spiritual welfare of Protestant soldiers and sailors. At the outset Dr. Jesse F. Forbes, Secretary of the New York Presbytery, announced that the Rev. Dr. Allen W. McCurdy had abandoned the Presbyterian ministry. Dr. McCurdy, pastor of the Morningside Presbyterian Church, and one of the best-known ministers in the city, campaigned ardently for Morris Hillquit and his immediate peace platform during the recent election. His Socialist tendencies were believed to have been responsible for his sudden termination of a long-standing connection with the church.

Dr. John F. Carson of the Central Church of Brooklyn and Chairman of the National Service Commission of the denomination, told of the co-operative work of the various Protestant denominations among the soldiers at Yaphank and urged that the atmosphere of hesitancy and halting which, he said, the commission had found in many places should give way to a wholehearted effort to arouse the entire church to a consciousness of America's righteous purpose in the war. He was seconded by Dr. William Merrill of the Brick Church, who dwelt upon the wisdom of converting all pacifists by reminding them of the real objects of the war. He said that when the commission visited President Wilson and asked how it could help, the President said:

"God knows I tried to keep out of war as long as I could honorably. The great thing you men in the church can do now is to keep fresh in the minds of the people the high ideals and purposes for which America entered the war."

CITY OFFERS MEDICAL AID.

Charities Commissioner Has Plan to Further Clinical Studies.

Officials and instructors of medical schools and colleges of the city qand the staffs of the various hospitals under municipal control were invited by First Deputy Commissioner H. C. Wright of the Department of Public Charities, in an address last night before the Society of Medical Jurisprudence, at the Academy of Medicine, to co-operate in making use of the material the city has to offer for the furthering of medical knowledge and clinical studies. Commissioner Wright presented his subject under the title of "The Municipality's Relation to Medical Education."

Of eighty-eight hospitals in the city having 100 or more free beds, he said, eighteen of the hospitals were operated by the city, having 16,000 beds, or many more than all the others combined, and he asserted that not more than one-fifth of the cases treated were considered for clinical or other educational opportunities by post-graduate students.

The suggestions of Commissioner Wright were approved by physicians. Some suggested that the private practitioner should have the use of the hospital facilities for his own cases, but this met with disapproval on the ground that the hospitals could not meet such a burden. A further recommendation that staffs of instructors be paid by the city was replied to by the Comissioner, who said that taxpayers probably would not agree to such an extra expense, even though the instructors would be willing to give more or all of their time to the work.

Dr. L. Pierce Clark, attached to the Randall's Island Hospitals, said an arrangement had been approved by Commissioner Kingsbury for systematic courses of medical college education in the City Hospital and the Institution for Feeble-Minded, which would open the first of the year.

CREWLESS BOAT 'VERY OLD.'

Device Used by British, Admiralty Says, as Early as 1885.

LONDON, Nov. 12.—The Admiralty has issued the following statement regarding the electrically controlled sea raiders which the Germans have been operating off Belgium, and several of which have been destroyed:

"The electrically controlled motor boats used on the Belgian Coast are twin petrol engine vessels, partially closed in, and travel at a high rate of speed. They carry a drum with between thirty and fifty miles of insulated single core cable, through which the boat is controlled electrically. The forepart carries a considerable charge of high explosives, probably from 300 to 500 pounds in weight.

"The method of operating is to start the engine, after which the crew leave the boat. A seaplane, protected by a strong fighting patrol, then accompanies the vessel at a distance of from three to five miles, and signals to the shore operator of the helm. These signals need only be 'starboard,' 'port,' or 'steady.' The boat is zig-zagged while being steered into a ship, and the charge is exploded automatically.

"The device is a very old one. A boat similarly controlled was used by H. M. S. Vernon, a torpedo experimental ship, as far back as 1885. The only new features in the German boat are the petrol engines and wireless signals, neither of which existed then."

UPTON MEN LEARN HOW TO 'GET' A HUN

Grizzled British Sergeant Gives Officers a Graphic Drill with Bayonet.

SHOWS SPEED IS DESIRABLE

'First Time I Met a 'Un in a Trench,' He Says, 'I Down't Remember Wot I Did, but I Got 'im.'

Special to The New York Times.

CAMP UPTON, YAPHANK, L. I., Nov. 12.—No better lesson in discipline could have been given than today when the national army recruits saw their officers, who have been laboring to instill implicit obedience in their men, voluntarily subject themselves to the caustic phrases of an English drill sergeant, one of the bayonet-fighting experts of the British Army.

Sergeant Major G. C. Covington, with the physique of an expert gymnast and with the long, waxed mustache and the flashing blue eyes of a veteran with twenty-eight years' continuous service in the British Army, has been assigned from the British General Headquarters staff for bayonet instruction work at Camp Upton. He is called one of the best drillmasters in the British Army. For many years he has been drilling recruits of all races in different parts of the British Empire. At the end of the Boer war he took charge of a battalion of the very men he had been fighting, and some of these pupils are now fighting the Germans. During the present war, after serving in the trenches with his regiment, he taught the use of the bayonet to 8,700 officers on Salisbury Plain.

Today Sergeant Major Covington grasped a rifle with bayonet fixed and turned to a class of specially selected commissioned and noncommissioned officers.

"This represents the sport of kings," he said. "Not ownly your life, but the whole civilized world depends on 'ow you use the bay'net. You are not arfter one man, but millions.

"When you go arfter a 'Un, you don't think of wot the 'Un is gowing to do to you. You think of wot you're gowing to do to the 'Un. It's a much pleasanter subject, and it keeps the 'Un thinkin' abaht himself. It distracts 'im, so to speak.

"You are gowing arfter an enemy that 'as violated every known code of civilized warfare, and 'e'll try to do wicked things to you. But 'e carn't stand the bay'net. If he grabs your bay'net, I'll show wou 'ow to use the butt of your rifle, and if 'e lays 'old of your rifle, I'll show you 'ow to kill a 'Un with your bare 'ands.

"The class will now form for bay'net instruction. By twos—tally off! Even numbers of the front rank and odd numbers of the rear rank eight paces to the front and rear. Mowve! Sharply, now, sharply!"

The Sergeant Major has a voice like a trumpet, that sent the officers scurrying for their lives, and he spoke without a smile.

"One small 'arf step to the right—mowve! Right! Now, 'old your rifles at 'igh port. I said 'igh port,' but down't 'old the rifle like a banjo or act like you was stabbin' Zeppelins. Now, on guard! No, no! Down't 'old your rifle like a swagger stick. On guard means to 'old the rifle in an easy, threatenin' attitood.

"Now, when you engage with a 'Un, you endeavor to keep 'im on the defensive. It's safer that wye, for it makes the 'Un forget abaht you. 'E may be a bit wicked now and then. If 'e parries, come dahn with your butt—so. But come back with your bay'net, for the further away your blade is from you, the further away the 'Un is.

"Don't play with the 'Un, gentlemen. Good baynet fighters never do that. The more a man knows abaht baynet fighting, the less 'e thinks 'e knows, and 'e endeavors to give the 'Un 'is fatal moment as soon as possible.

"When you get a 'Un, withdraw your baynet immediately. This is a very important matter, gentlemen. The first time I met a 'Un in a trench, I down't remember wot I did, but I got 'im. But I did not withdraw my baynet quick enough, for I went 'ead over 'eels in the trench, leaving my baynet there. Later I 'ad to gow back again and get it—against my inclination."

There is no spirit of play about Sergeant Major Covington. Every command he gave required instant obedience, and he devised all sorts of exercises and evolutions to keep the minds of his pupils on the alert. No matter what the rank of the laggard officer, the British drill Sergeant had an appropriate comment that, while it could not be construed disrespectful in any way, was highly successful in preventing a repetition of the incident. And the waxed mustaches and flashing blue eyes had only to turn to the appreciative audience of officers and soldiers to silence any sounud of amusement from that quarter.

"In bayonet fighting," explained the Sergeant Major, "success can be obtained only through the closest union of brain, eye, and muscle. Discipline, no matter what the rank or education, must be immediate."

Only twice did the Sergeant Major relax his gravity. For fancing purposes he required something less formidable than cold steel, and he summoned a recruit to his side.

"Get me some broom 'andles," he said.

The recruit was plainly puzzled.

"Some broom 'andles! Down't you know wot I mean?" Then with an enormous wink he said:

"If they down't give 'em to you, tell 'em the Colonel wants 'em."

The second relaxation came when a non-commissioned officer cut his finger slightly during the bayonet charge and looked at it.

"Down't let me smell that blood," cautioned the British veteran. "Down't let me smell it! It mykes me wild."

The classes now receiving bayonet instruction in turn will drill the recruits. Dummies are being rigged up outside every infantry barracks, and a bayonet fighting course is being constructed with trenches, hurdles, and entanglements. Later there will be competitions in bayonet practice between the various companies and regiments in the New York City division.

THIRTY-SECOND ANNUAL NATIONAL HORSE SHOW GETS UNDER WAY IN GARDEN ARENA

HORSE SHOW OPENS BEFORE HUGE CROWD

Stars of the Ring Receive the Homage of Society from Many Countries.

FAMED GARDEN IN A GLOW

Great Building Is Attractively Decorated for the Notable Red Cross Benefit Exhibition.

In a blaze of light and color, the aristocracy of the horse domain held court in gorgeous style in Madison Square Garden last night, while a vast crowd of society and horse lovers gazed with admiration on the animated picture of equine beauty in the tan bark ring. It was the opening of the National Horse Show, which this year takes on a new interest because the entire receipts will be a gift to the American Red Cross. Society has taken a greater interest in the spectacle than in any show since 1885, when the Duke of Marlborough was here for the show. Every one of the boxes has been taken, and was filled with a fashionable throng last evening.

It is the one time of the year when the horse comes into his own. From his high pedestal he reigns supreme in a setting of decorative beauty. Folks come from far and near in limousines, sedans, phaetons, and landaulets to pay homage. Crowded from the boulevards and drives by the intrusion of the motor car, the national show remains as the one occasion where the well-groomed horses command their deserved attention.

The old garden never was so resplendent as it is this year. Great awning stripes of red and white hide the roof and walls. From the ceilings hang great baskets of creeping ivy. Growing red geraniums and clinging vines ornament the boxes while one end of the Garden is a solid bank of towering pine cedars and other forest trees. Twinkling among the bowers of green are hundreds of blue lights, and from somewhere in the depths of this woodland verdure is hidden the Old Guard Band, which blares forth melodies to which the show horses prance about the enclosure.

The large number of entries in the numerous classes and the attendance at the opening night promise much for the success of this commendable Red Cross benefit. It was a picturesque crowd which promenaded about the Garden. The uniforms of army officers of many countries added a touch of color to the throng. Red Cross nurses selling programs were everywhere in the gathering. Belgian, Italian, French, and English officers mingled with society. The box of the National Horse Show Association at the Madison Avenue end of the arena represented a cricket marquee, and was decorated with the flags of all the Allies.

Jumpers Guided by Fair Riders.

The Garden was well filled when the bugle brought the class for ladies' hunters into the ring. This was the most spectacular event of the evening, and prolonged applause greeted the women riders as they guided their hunters over the jumps. Mrs. Thomas Hitchcock, the veteran rider of this class, sent the noted jumper Cavalier over the barriers with unusual skill, and little Becky Lanier, a mere schoolgirl, with her hair down her back, came in for much applause as she guided Down East, last year's winner, over the timbers.

Miss Marion Hollins rode Harry Payne Whitney's Moonblossom, and Mrs. J. P. Kincon sent Rock Cress over the jumps. There were many other women riders in this class, and the daring performances over the hurdles furnished the most exciting event of an evening which abounded in interesting feats of horsemanship.

After Cavalier had captured the blue in the class for ladies' hunters, the old gelding which has won so many championships was brought out again for the officers' jumping class, and in this he was ridden by Captain Thomas Hitchcock, who joined the service when the war broke out. Cavalier jumped as well as before, but the Allies had sent formidable contenders in the stable of Colonel Sir Adam Beck, the leading cross-country sportsman of Canada. Colonel Beck rode four of his horses and in such a finished manner that he will carry the cup presented by William H. Moore back to Canada. His winning mount, Sir Thomas, was of a sturdier type than Cavalier, while Captain Joseph W. Viner's Yellow Stone Regent also was placed above Mr. Hitchcock's jumper.

The spectators were thrilled at the afternoon session with a remarkable exhibition of a battlefield hitch of twelve Belgian horses owned by Walter H. Hanley of Providence. These massive roan horses, three abreast in columns of four were driven around the ring at different paces varying from a canter to a gallop. With remarkable skill the Belgian steeds, each weighing more than a ton, circled about the tanbark ring changing pace and evolutions at the staccato shout of the clever reinsman. The appearance of strength and the unique formation of the team convey an impression of titanic power.

Mr. Hanley's team is American bred. Because of the ravages of war, the mammoth animals are practically extinct. The studs and stock farms about Liége have been destroyed by the German invasion, and the district where hundreds of these horses were bred each year is now a charred waste. The driving of Billy Wells, who handled the reins that guided more than fifteen tons without a break or a slip, attracted the greatest admiration. Volleys of cheers greeted Wells as he manoeuvred his gigantic animals around the ring.

At the afternoon session an enthusiastic reception was in store for the Ladies' Four-in-Hand Driving Club coach, the Arrow, which had been tooled from the Colony Club by Miss Marion Hollins. Mrs. C. B. Alexander was the hostess of the party, which included Mrs. Arthur Scott Burden, Miss Eleanora Sears, Miss Alexander, Mrs. Thomas Hastings, and Mrs. Arthur Iselin. Mrs. Alexander and her guests left the coach in the show ring.

The judging began early and the various classes brought out numerous entries. There was unusual interest in the class for children's harness ponies, and the little tots handled their entries in a manner which brought much applause. The class included Shetlands and hackney midgets. First place went to Halcyon Farm's famous winner, Irvington Nipper, with Master Mairs Duryea driving. Glorious Me, owned by Miss Pussy Thompson and driven by little Marion Healy, was second.

KING LARIGO LOSES HIS CROWN

Costly Pony Gets No Better Than Third Place as Show Opens.

In the thirty-two years that the annual horse show has held the attention of Madison Square Garden crowds there never has been a more varied program than that presented yesterday for the Red Cross fixture, which promises to go down in history as one of the most successful of the National Horse Show Association's ventures. Owners of the leading show candidates all over the country sent their best into the ring, and the Canadian contingent was particularly large, the jumpers and hunters of Sir Adam Beck and Crow & Murray being reinforced by the saddlers of Frederick F. English and the trotters of Miss Katherine L. Wilks.

Nearly every type of horse was exhibited during the day and each had its coterie of admirers. The miniature Shetlands, competing against larger ponies, aroused the sympathy of the women in the crowd, but the real enthusiasm broke out when the mammoth Belgian draft horses thundered into the ring, and, weighing a ton or more apiece, out[illegible] that rivaled the more trimly bu[illegible] [illegible]ies provided the sensation of the judging, which came so early in the afternoon that few were present to witness the downfall of Hamilton Farm's King Larigo, the Shetland for which James Cox Brady paid $10,000 and which has scored victories for his previous owner in many Garden shows. The King was shown in a class for Shetland ponies in harness, and, though full of fire, looked rather out of place, as he was driven by a man who weighed almost as much as the pony.

Favor Island Type.

King Larigo was racy looking and full of fire. His action reminded one of the hackney and he moved with perfect smoothness, but he was not as distinctly typical of the Shetland as some of the other entries. The judges evidently favored the island type and the $10,000 beauty was relegated to third place, while the blue was captured by Senator Jackson, owned by Miss K. and Master J. Hauck. Miss Patricia Garvan's Silver Tips was the other true Shetland placed above King Larigo.

William H. Moore began accumulating ribbons early in the day with his hackney fillies. His first blue was gained by the three-year-old Medea, bred by himself, and he took the chief award in the class for pony fillies with Seaton Easter, also a daughter of the imported Marlboro. These successes were introductory to the achievements of the harness horses from the Moore stable later in the day.

Though the trim, high-stepping hackneys, shown on leading lines, were in high favor with the experts in the morning session, the general interest of the spectators was not aroused until the afternoon, when saddlers and harness horses were paraded for the awards of the judges and the criticism of the crowd. Mrs. Robert E. Tod's Sceptre, champion for two years past, was one of the first to be shown in a class for docked or undocked saddle horses. The beautiful chestnut had been retired, but her owner could not withstand the inducement to show the English mare's superb action in the interest of the Red Cross.

Sceptre was as handsome as ever, and her fine, even gait was greatly admired, but she lacked the condition of some of the other competitors, and it was only by a narrow margin that she earned the blue over J. A. P. Ramsdell's Princess, a registered Kentucky horse, but bred in Texas.

Running Stock Gets Blue.

The racing contingent played a prominent part in the novice class for horses exceeding 15.2, for the class was judged by F. Ambrose Clark, the owner of steeplechasers and a gentleman rider, while the winner was sent into the ring by W. R. Coe, another prominent owner of racehorses. The triumph for the racing men was complete, as Ben Dale, the gelding shown by Mr. Coe, is by Ellis Dale-Fairy Maid, and is a true thoroughbred. That the class was a good one is proved by the fact that Daniel Guggenheim's The Knut, a winner later, was placed only fourth.

A wide field was covered in the class for novice harness horses, the exhibitors including John L. Buchnell of Ohio, Crow & Murray of Toronto, and the Buttonwood Farm of W. A. Lieber of Berwyn, Penn. The latter showed Galloping Major, of fine action, but a trifle heavy in build, while William H. Moore was represented by Ruxton, a nicely balanced bay that responded splendidly to the driving of George Chipchase. The blue went to Ruxton, with Galloping Major second, and John R. Thompson's Lord Brilliant third.

A class for four-in-hand ponies brought out three teams, and it looked like unfair competition to pit the quartet of Shetlands owned by the Hamilton Farm against the fours of Mrs. Lyne Selden and Mrs. Francis P. Garvan, which were so near the horse class that they were able to easily draw the regulation drags. The Shetlands, however, showed all the pluck of a Benny Leonard when compared with a Jess Willard, and there were many who thought that their dashing manner of going deserved better treatment than the yellow ribbon. Mrs. Lyne Selden's four was cleverly handled and stepped in unison, so they were placed above the Garvan quartet.

Young Rider Unseated.

A noted young girl gained fresh laurels in the class for children's saddle ponies for the McE. Bowman Cup. Miss Constance Sala Regan was mounted on Bantamite, and there never was a moment that the well-trained pony did not respond immediately to the demand of its clever rider. While this class was being shown there was some excitement when Miss Natalie Mae Coe's Midnight, ridden by her young brother Harry, became fractious. Little Coe did his best to master the frightened animal, but finally the pony got the best of him, and he landed unhurt on the tanbark. Master Herbert Healy's Knighton Early Greylight was the equal of Bantamite in conformation, and when he settled down was nearly as perfect in motion as Bantamite, but the latter was the better behaved and gained the blue over the Healy entry.

A. W. Atkinson's Malden, hitched with Memmon, gained a blue in a class for harness pairs, and later showed his versatility by appearing in a class for saddlers. He was not quite up to the standard of the other competitors, and the blue went to Daniel Guggenheim's The Knut, ridden by Mrs. Robert Guggenheim. Mrs. C. A. Allaire rode Sparkle, a showy dark chestnut entered by S. L. Elkus, and took the red ribbon over Woodford, owned and ridden by Mrs. Edwin Gates Babcock.

SOCIETY ATTENDS IN FORCE.

Fashionable Assemblage in Boxes at Each Session of First Day.

There was a brilliant representation of society at the Horse Show, both afternoon and evening. War has toned down much of the spectacular in costuming of former years, yet the women in the boxes and along the promenade never looked smarter than they did yesterday. Sombre hues—black and deep browns and blues—were worn at the matinée, and pastel shades, with little display of jewels, at night.

There were many children in the boxes yesterday, who found much to interest them in the ring with the various pony classes, some with children driving. A picturesque phase directly due to the war was the host of young women ushers in uniforms suggesting the Red Cross, and a catalogue booth presided over by pretty girls and young matrons, also in uniform. Knitting sweaters and helmets occupied many of the women in the boxes, and another military touch was the smart uniforms of visiting men from the army and navy.

Mrs. David Wagstaff, in Box 13, so long occupied by the late Alfred G. Vanderbilt, had Mrs. Dave Coddington and children, and Mr. and Mrs. Harry McVicar as her guests at the afternoon performance. Mrs. Peter Cooper Hewitt, Mrs. W. Russell Grace, Mrs. Joseph B. Thomas, Mrs. J. Macy Willets, Mrs. Grafton H. Pyne, Mrs. Adolf Ladenburg, Mrs. George F. Baker, Jr., Mrs. Percy R. Pyne, Mrs. James Cox Brady, and Mrs. Ambrose Monell were among the boxholders who entertained during the afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Claus Spreckles and Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Spreckles were the guests in Box 40 of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis L. Clarke.

The serious attitude of those interested in the show this year was more accentuated last night by the marked absence of evening dresses. Most of the women came in dinner gowns of sombre shades, and some even wore afternoon frocks. Mrs. Burke Roche, who was the guest of Mrs. Peter Cooper Hewitt, worn a simple gown of black satin and carried her black Pomeranian.

Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Stotesbury did not arrive from Philadelphia in time for the afternoon session, but they came in the evening, and had as their guests in Box 46 Miss Lota Robinson, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Brooke, and Harry Black.

With Mr. and Mrs. R. Lawrence Smith in Box 26 were Mr. and Mrs. David Stevenson. Mrs. Adolf Ladenburg entertained a party in Box 16, including Mr. and Mrs. William Lowell Putnam.

Mrs. E. H. Harriman occupied her box during the evening and was accompanied by her daughter, Mrs. Robert Livingston Gary.

Some of those seen on the promenade were Mrs. Alfred G. Vanderbilt, the Duchesse de Chaulnes, who brought her son, the Duc de Chaulnes; Mrs. E. N. Breitung, Mrs. W. R. Grace, Mrs. Thomas Hastings, Mrs. Thomas Hitchcock, Mrs. William Dupont, Miss Hilda Holloway, Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Bonaparte, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Harriman, Mr. and Mrs. Henry L. Burnett, and Mr. and Mrs. Martin L. Schwartz.

VIAU'S FAST ONES FINISH ONE, TWO

Westy Hogan Leads Omar Khayyam in Bowie Handicap in Record Time.

PIMLICO, Md., Nov. 12.—Wilfrid Viau dominated the rich Bowie Handicap this afternoon and, by finishing first with Westy Hogan and second with the great Omar Khayyam, the Canadian sportsmen carried off the largest portion of the $10,000 offered for the mile and a half event that had attracted the entries of the best thoroughbreds in the country.

In the absence of Old Rosebud the supremacy of the three-year-olds was demonstrated, as Omar Khayyam carried the top weight of 130 pounds, while his stable companion, though allotted ten pounds less, was next in order and was conceding weight to all the aged horses in the race. The triumph of the three-year-old division was completed by A. K. Macomber's Sunbonnet finishing third.

Westy Hogan's efforts have been mainly confined to sprint races, and it was the general belief that his mission in the big race was to make the pace for the more distinguished Omar Khayyam. He proved such an able pacemaker that he killed off all the others, but went further than that by sticking to the end of the long route and leading Omar to the judges. That both the Viau colts were at the top of their form is shown by the time of 2:31 4-5, which clipped two and a fifth seconds from the track record.

WILEY IS CARMAN'S MATE.

Pair Forms First Team Arranged for Six-Day Cycle Race.

Clarence Carman and George Wiley form the first team to be paired for the six-day bike race at Madison Square Garden the week of Dec. 2-8. Promoter Wellman signed this combination last night. Carman is the champion motor pace follower and Wiley was the runner-up to the Long Island speedster last season.

Wellman expects to have the field all completed early next week. Arthur Spencer, the national sprint champion, is still without a partner. First it was suggested that he be teamed with Jackie Clarke, and then with Oscar Egg. Now the latest mate suggested for him is Bobby Walthour, who returned from France the other day.

COLUMBIA REGULARS BACK.

Cochran and Rosen Expected to Help Team in Final Battles.

Trainer Gus Peterson of the Columbia football team announced that both Dal Cochran and Izzy Rosen, who were out of the Hobart game with infected toes, would be back in uniforms next week. There is a chance that Rosen will be able to play Saturday, but the infection in his foot has been so serious that not until today could he put any weight upon the injured member. Cochran had his infected toe treated again yesterday, and Peterson declared that Dal would surely play on Monday.

The 'Varsity did not don uniforms yesterday, but Coaches Metcalf and Thorp took the regulars into the training room for a lecture on the Hobart game and a forecast of the Wesleyan contest, which comes this Saturday. Coach Metcalf has scheduled long scrimmages for the next two days, a signal drill for Thursday, and a rest for Friday, when the Freshmen play the Wesleyan first year team.

Tom Thorp used the most of his time yesterday in drilling the Freshmen on old plays and taught some new ones he picked up at the Dartmouth-Penn game. DeFronzo, the fullback, who has been half of the Freshmen defense, will not be able to play for two weeks, if at all. In the game with Horace Mann, last Friday, his rib was broken during the last play of the first half.

FORDHAM BEGINS DRIVE.

Coach McCaffery Points Squad for Cornell Game Saturday.

The Fordham eleven settled down to hard work yesterday for the game with Cornell, next Saturday, at Ithaca. It was the first time since the Georgetown game that Coach McCaffrey had all the players out for the afternoon's drill, with the exception of Frisch. Twenty-four men went through the pratice that lasted nearly two hours.

Following the long punting workout, Coach McCaffrey sent the 'Varsity and scrub elevens through a long siege of signals. There was a lot of dash to the execution of the plays. The squad as a whole is in better shape than it has been for two weeks and the players are confident of trimming Cornell.

Following the signal drill Coach McCaffrey started the two elevens in a short scrimmage, in which no scoring was done. The 'Varsity lined up in the same fashion as it faced Georgetown and as it will probably meet Cornell.

An interclass football series will be started this week to enable more students to interest themselves in the game. The Freshmen and Sophomores had their annual battle last week, but it is now planned to bring all the classes together on the gridiron.

A game will be announced today or tomorrow that will close either one of the two vacant dates on the schedule—Nov. 24 or Thanksgiving Day. Manager Delehanty stated yesterday that he had secured a good team, but would not let it be known until the date was determined.

NO REST FOR N. Y. U. MEN.

Coach Wall Sends Eleven Through Long Workout.

The New York University football team was not allowed the customary Monday rest after a Saturday game this week. Both freshman and 'Varsity combinations spent most of the time in signal drill. In this form of work Coach Wall was insistent that the teams line up and get under way speedily. In all the games to date the slowness of the team to get under way has been a subject of comment.

For the major part of the day the 'Varsity was run up and down the field to instill a machine-like precision into the working of the eleven. The Violet's crippled list has now dwindled considerably. While several of the men, who had to get into the game Saturday to save the day, are not yet fully recuperated from their previous hurts, the general well-being of the team is much better than a week ago.

All efforts are now turned toward the two last games, the one with Stevens Saturday and the Columbia game the week following. The latter is considered the most important and the one the Violet is the most desirous of winning. Nothing is being left undone to insure a victory.

NILES INSTALLED BY A. A. U.

Metropolitan Association Disposes of Routine at Meeting.

Fred W. Niles of the Morningside Athletic Club was formally installed last night as Chairman of the Registration Committee of the Metropolitan Association of the Amateur Athletic Union at the first formal meeting of the newly organized body. Niles will fill the vacancy at the head of the committee caused by the resignation of James Clark, Emanuel House A. A., who recently took up his duties as athletic officer at Camp Upton. By a unanimous mail vote, which was opened last night, E. Wetmore Kinsley of the Hollywood Inn A. A., was selected as the fifth member of the board. Kinsley is not a new member of the committee, as he has served it for several years past.

A resolution was adopted requesting Frederick W. Rubien, President of the local association, to introduce at the annual meeting of the Amateur Athletic Union in St. Louis, on Nov. 19, an amendment to the present rules of the organization which will permit soldier athletes to compete at track and field meets as post entries.

Several athletes were brought up on charges of competing on expired registration cards, but were let off with reprimands. E. Thwaite, unattached, was suspended for sixty days by the committee for representing himself as a non-prize winner when entering for a recent athletic meet.

PLANS HOCKEY AT CAMPS.

War Commission Favorable to Proposal of Hockey for Soldiers.

An extensive plan for building ice rinks at military training camps and for staging hockey matches between strong amateur teams for the amusement of the soldiers has been submitted by Cornelius Fellowes, proprietor of St. Nicholas Ice Rink, to the Commission on Training Camp Activities. Mr. Fellowes has offered his services to supervise the building of rinks at each camp, and has also agreed to arrange for matches between the teams which play at St. Nick, or between local teams and teams made up of drafted soldiers.

In a letter to Dr. Joseph E. Raycroft, of Princeton, N. J., a member of the War Department's Commission, Mr. Fellowes says: "There are a number of former hockey players at camps in this vicinity and I know there will be little difficulty in getting a strong team together. But if this should not prove practicable, I will gladly arrange to bring down two teams to play for the boys. We will have at least one fast team in this city this Winter. We can always arrange to have visiting teams stay over a day to play for the soldiers."

Dr. Raycroft in reply states that at least two camp rinks will be built, and negotiations are now under way with the Athletic Director of Camp Upton for a third.

Taylor Wins Skating Race.

The first skating party of the Winter was held at the Brooklyn Ice Palace last night by the Adelphi Chapter, Settlement House Association. In a half-mile handicap race, William Taylor of the New York Athletic Club was first, from scratch, in 1:29 3-5. A. O. Lake, New York Athletic Club, was second, and A. H. Willett third. Taylor also skated a quarter-mile backward in 1:04 3-5. Mrs. R. Beresford, an English fancy skater, and Miss Reta Walter gave exhibitions.

CLUB OWNERS HAVE A STORMY SESSION

American Association Adjourns Until Tomorrow After Discussing New League Plan.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 12.—There was no secession of dissatisfied club owners of the American Association, nor was a new attempt made to form a new league, at the annual meeting here today of the American Association. After a stormy five-hour session, during which James C. McGill, President of the Indianapolis Club, made the suggestion of a new league, the meeting adjourned until Wednesday, to await action on redistricting of certain minor league territory expected to be taken by the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues, which meets tomorrow.

President Hickey of the American Association declared tonight that the movement of the Indianapolis, Louisville, and Toledo Clubs to withdraw and merge with certain clubs of the International League appeared to be losing force. He predicted that the association would open the 1918 season intact. There were reports, however, that McGill, Roger Bresnahan, owner of the Toledo Club, and O. H. Wathen, President of the Louisville Club, would carry their fight before the National Association.

M. H. Sexton, President of the governing body of the minors, said he did not know what action would be taken on the subject of redistricting territory, but if the faction desiring such changes could control enough votes it was probable, he said, that some new alignment would be made.

"It appears certain that some changes must be made to meet conditions caused by the war," he said. "Some of the leagues cannot hope to exist unless changes are made. I doubt if some of the smaller organizations will open their gates until the close of the war."

The American Association club owners, in considering plans for next season, expressed a desire to play a 140-game schedule instead of 154 games. They proposed to open the season about May 1, but will not take definite action until the schedule of the major leagues is decided upon. President Hickey pointed to the postponement of eighty games during the first eight weeks of last season because of unseasonable weather as an argument in favor of a shorter schedule.

The fact that Jack Hendricks, manager of the pennant-winning Indianapolis club of the American Association, was the "college graduate with a degree" that Branch Rickey, President of the St. Louis Nationals, sought to succeed Miller Huggins as manager of the St. Louis club, was one of the big surprises of the day. Hendricks is an alumnus of Northwestern, having graduated at Law.

MISKE AND DILLON AGAIN.

First of the Last Bouts Under Frawley Law to be Held Tonight.

The first of the last boxing exhibitions to be held before the Frawley law goes out of effect on Thursday will be decided this evening at the Broadway Sporting Club of Brooklyn, where Billy Miske, the St. Paul light-heavyweight, and Jack Dillon of Indianapolis will be opponents for ten rounds. This contest will be a return bout, as the principals have met in the ring on several occasions before. In all matches Miske has come off the winner or the popular decision. The boxers are reported in good condition and an interesting bout is expected.

At the Pioneer S. C. a card of two ten-round bouts will be put on, marking the last show of the club under the Frawley law. In the main event Walter Laurett of the west side will box Marty Cross, while the combatants in the other ten-round exhibition will be Walter Mohr of Brooklyn and Paul Doyle.

Millrose A. A. Names Harriers.

The Millrose A. A. has announced its team entry for the senior national A. A. U. cross-country run, which will be held at Boston on Nov. 24, and included the following athletes among its six representatives: Charles Pores, Villar Kyronen, Nick Gianakopolus, Mike Devaney, Charles De Stefano, and Joe Nulty. This club won last year's championship title, while Kyronen carried off the individual title.

COCHRAN LEADS HOWISON.

Young Canadian Forges Ahead in 18.2 Balkline Match, 400 to 225.

Welker Cochran, the youthful billiardist of Canada, last night outclassed Leonard Howison in the first block of their 2,000-point 18.2 balkline match, held at Howison's Billiard Academy, and ran out his required 400 points in fifteen innings, while Howison was gathering a total of 225. The young Canadian, while not playing up to his expected form, showed a game that was superior to that put forth by Howison, and led from the start.

At times the fast style of Cochran made his playing appear careless in that he did not stop to give full thought to his next shot, and the result was that several shots which ordinarily would be easy went astray. This was particularly true of the thirteenth frame, when Cochran ran up 21 points and then failed to get out of balk, and in the following frame, after rounding out 46, the Canadian miscued on a shot that was anything but difficult. Cochran started in the lead with a run of 103 in the first inning and he kept to the front thereafter.

Howison played with the majority of the breaks of the game against him, and more frequently than not he advanced to the table with the balls set in decidedly hard position. His best run was one of 48, which he made in the twelfth frame, and he averaged 15. Cochran, in addition to his starting run of 103, gathered clusters of 72 and 46 through good nursing play and interesting gathering shots, and averaged 26 10-15. The second block of 400 points will be played this evening.

The score:

Cochran—103 14 29 21 13 72 14 15 7 33 0 7 21 46 7—400. High runs—103 72 46. Average—26 10-15.

Howison—0 20 0 17 6 42 0 5 23 8 4 48 7 12 33—225. High runs—48 42 33. Average—15.

LAYTON SKILLFUL WITH CUE.

Defeats Moore and Makes Three High Runs in Angle Game.

In defeating George Moore in an Interstate Three-Cushion Billiard League match at Thum's Billiard Academy last night, John Layton displayed unusual execution. Layton won by the score of 50 to 30 in fifty-one innings, making high runs of 7, 6, and 6, whereas Moore's best group was 4. Layton, who is the former pocket billiard champion, represents the Majestic of Detroit in the above league, and he will play Moore again tonight.

BOXING NOT AGAINST LAW.

Governor Whitman Says Legitimate Clubs Can Hold Bouts.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 12.—While in Buffalo today to speak before the American Federation of Labor, Governor Whitman, in a newspaper interview, stated his views on the subject of the future of boxing in the State, as follows:

"There is no law against boxing in this State.

"There is nothing to prevent boxing bouts, either in legitimate clubs or in one's home, for that matter.

"Where bouts are conducted in legitimate clubs for members of the organization there can be no objection, provided the contests are held in an orderly manner.

"I see no reason why legitimate clubs should not have boxing."

JOHN DREW REVIVES 'THE GAY LORD QUEX'

Pinero's Masterpiece of "The Great Scene of the Third Act" Still Thrills.

MISS ILLINGTON AS SOPHY

Pinero's Revised Version Still Holds to the Main Lines of the Old Play.

THE GAY LORD QUEX, a revival of Sir Arthur Wing Pinero's play. At the Forty-eighth Street Theatre.

The Marquis of Quex	John Drew
Sir Chichester Frayne	George Pounceford
Captain Bastling	Leonard Willey
"Valma"	Rexford Kendrick
The Duchess of Strood	Irby Marshall
Julia, Countess of Owbridge	Helen Beaumont
Mrs. Jack Eden	Louise Drew
Muriel Eden	Violet Kemble Cooper
Sophy Fullgarney	Margaret Illington
Miss Moon	Nella Jefferis
Miss Huddle	Florence Fair
Miss Claridge	Maxine MacDonald
Miss Limbird	Yvonne Jarrette
Morgan	Robert Brinton
A Young Lady	Marion Buckler

The smoke of battle still lingers about the first production of "The Gay Lord Quex," some sixteen years ago—nineteen in London. That was the time when it was the way of battles to be shrouded in smoke. There were those who thought the play far too immoral for good folk to go to, and there were those who gloried in its stark realism and hailed it as a masterpiece of dramatic construction. Sixteen years ago in the world of the theatre "dramatic construction" was the last word of those who were always talking.

Last night what impressed one was not so much the immorality of the people on the stage as their shadowy unreality. Instead of being too thick, they were, with one or two exceptions, far too thin. Even the smoke of that ancient battle seemed dense and substantial by comparison. Quex, the abandoned profligate, who was marrying a young and innocent girl; Muriel, who really loved her young Captain, but was persuading herself that she loved Quex; Sir Chichester, back from West Africa, whose roving eye dwelt caressingly on all pretty women, and, finally, the Duchess, with her spotless reputation and her memories of warm evenings—as a footlight assemblage, they seemed curiously lacking in dramatic interest or in any real relation with life. And all this in spite of the fact, or at least the press agent's assurance, that Sir Arthur has rewritten the play.

And then came "the great scene of the third act." It was not life that had mattered hitherto, not morals nor even drama. In the manner invented by Scribe and perfected by Sardou the main purpose during two mortal acts was to lay the train for a mine, to be duly exploded at the penultimate curtain. Well, the mine exploded, and the house "rose to it." When Sophy finally pulled the bell-cord, the most sophisticated responded as instinctively, as fully, as the most primitive. That scene remains what it was at first, the most finely conceived, the most adroitly and powerfully developed, of all the scenes of dramatic blasting in the English drama.

Mr. Drew looked almost as young as Sophy declared when she was trying to betray him with a kiss. And his salient comedy method, his laconic and masculine humor have never been more happily in evidence. He is indeed a sterling actor of a school that is rapidly passing. In his person Quex seemed a far less objectionable old rounder than is suggested by the lines describing his past. The great scene of his struggle with Sophy he carried with a rightness of feeling, an emotional intensity—always beneath the surface of his racy speech and manner—that contributed powerfully to the dramatic effect. It is the right rendering of the part, and it stood out prominently as an evidence of Pinero's once vaunted realism, which was less manifest in other parts and fared worse in the hands of other actors.

Sophy Fullgarney also, with her strange mingling of back-stairs sentimentality and obliquity with genuine heroism, is also a real characterization, though it is not until the "great scene" that the portrait is fully roughed in. Miss Illington lacked subtlety. Many of the finer values escaped her.

Even in the bedroom scene her performance was without the adroit gradations which are necessary to its ultimate effect. But presence she has always; and, in the final moment, she triumphed by a display of sheer emotional power. In the two leading parts the play is quite adequately, even notably, cast.

The other parts suffered from a combination of unreality in the writing and heaviness in the interpretation. As the Duchess of Strood, Irby Marshall was abundantly handsome, but deficient in art. To adapt an old saying, she looked like the queen, but played like the deuce. Whereas the task of the actress in this part is to realize and render credible so much shameless intriguing, she emphasized its crudity.

We write plays differently nowadays. Our battles of the drama are fought with more nearly smokeless powder. But it was a stirring spectacle, the belching of great guns, and it is interesting to discover how the pulse still stirs to it.

"What's Your Husband Doing?" a farce, in three acts, by George V. Hobart, was presented last night, for the first time in New York, at the Thirty-ninth Street Theatre, with Hale Hamilton featured in one of the leading characters. The play, said to have been considerably rewritten, came to New York after an original production in Chicago last season, when, with Maclyn Arbuckle, Thomas Ross, and Jeanne Eagels in the cast, its success was not startling.

The plot of the farce revolves—not so merrily as to make one dizzy—about the situations and confusions that develop from the activities of two divorce lawyers, their clients, and their wives. Every one in character is innocent, but the complications put each man's wife in a compromising position from the point of view of her husband—and vice versa. The situations in the lawyers' office, a roadhouse on the Boston Post Road, and a Westchester jail, and conversational whipsnapping in every scene provide what amusement there is in the play.

The audience seemed to enjoy the last act most—when all of the principal actors found themselves in jail.

BEWITCHING MUSIC IN 'HER REGIMENT'

Victor Herbert's Melody the Chief Feature of a Rather Old Style Operetta.

DONALD BRIAN IS THE STAR

His Greatest Triumph When He Dances with Cissie Sewell—Audrey Maple Pleasing.

HER REGIMENT, an operetta in three acts. Book and lyrics by William Le Baron; music by Victor Herbert. At the Broadhurst.

Colonel Ponstable	Hugh Chilvers
Andre De Courcy	Donald Brian
Blanquet	Frank Moulan
Eugene De Merrimac	Sidney Jarvis
Sergeant Sabretache	Frederick Manatt
Carabine	George Averill
Francois	Frank Meyers
Estelle Duvernay	Audrey Maple
Lisette Berlier	Josie Intropodi
Mme. Guerriere	Paulina French
Jeannette	Norma Brown
Dancers	Cissie Sewell, Edyth Mason

A generally melodic score by Victor Herbert which contains several numbers of a more or less bewitching quality is the most distinguishing feature of "Her Regiment," a somewhat old-fashioned operetta which had its first performance at the Broadhurst Theatre last night. It is a score which has several resounding finales in addition to the tunefulness of its more delicate portions, and, if it fails greatly to enhance the reputation of Mr. Herbert, it will be only because that gentleman has given us so much that is good in the past. An audience inclined to over-friendliness seemed quite delighted with it and accorded a vigorous reception to the composer, who was in the orchestra pit for the occasion.

For the rest, "Her Regiment" is a comic opera with a comic opera plot. As originally planned, it was to have served as a co-starring vehicle for Carolina White, of operatic fame, and Donald Brian, but, as finally revealed to New York, it is Mr. Brian alone who is the star. A brief appearance in vaudeville in a straight rôle has left him no less the Donald of old, and he still dances with grace, sings a trifle, and wears his evening clothes to perfection. Possibly his greatest triumph of the evening came in the second act, when he danced with a pleasing young woman named Cissie Sewell.

Mr. Herbert has found a new librettist in the person of William Le Baron, already represented here this season by "The Very Idea." Mr. Le Baron's skill as a writer of musical comedy of the modern variety is long established, but in "Her Regiment," an operetta of the old school, he has been unable to burst the rigid bonds which confine this form of entertainment. The result is a book which is generally highly dull.

Miss White has been replaced in the cast by Audrey Maple, whose blonde beauty is always pleasant to behold, and who sings pleasingly. The company also includes Frank Moulan, who, as a Colonel's orderly, is as humorous as the circumstances permit.

MR. BONNET PLAYS ORGAN.

First of a Series of Five Recitals in the Hotel Astor.

Joseph Bonnet, the admirable French organist who came to New York last Spring under the auspices of the Franco-American Association for Musical Art, took refuge for a proposed series of organ recitals, in the ballroom of the Hotel Astor. After an experience with the fine organ of the City College, a long way from the musical centre of the town, and with the ciphering instrument in Aeolian Hall, the Hotel Astor ballroom seemed to offer the most available instrument for public use.

Mr. Bonnet gave yesterday the first of a projected series of five recitals of a historical character. This was devoted to forerunners of Bach, from Andrea Gabrieli, Antonio de Cabezon, Palestrina, and other sixteenth century masters down to Buxtehude, Purcell, Pachelbel, and others of the seventeenth and eighteenth. Mr. Bonnet ended with Bach's prelude and fugue in G minor. So long a stretch of music largely archaic is something of a strain upon the listener, however beautiful. And many of these pieces are extremely beautiful: the "Ricercare" of Palestrina, one of a few organ pieces that he composed; the toccata by Frescobaldi, the fugue by Couperin, the robust music of Buxtehude, the two charming pieces by de Grigny and Clérambault, were conspicuous. Mr. Bonnet played with the accomplished skill that he showed so amply last Spring. There was a large audience.

Dorothy Berliner, Pianist, Plays.

Dorothy Berliner, a pianist who made good the promise of musical sincerity, poetic feeling, and in her classic pieces, an absence of pyrotechnics atoned by a cameo-like phrasing and tone-shading, was heard in an artistic recital yesterday afternoon at Aeolian Hall, against the distraction of grand opera's opening season. Miss Berliner's mature musicianship, better than noisy virtuosity, was a pleasure to observe in the Bach-Busoni D minor Chaconne, to which she restored more of the spirit of the original Bach, and again in Beethoven's less often played Sonata Op. 100. There were other numbers of Chopin, Rachmaninoff, and Liszt.

Antonio Augenti in Song Recital.

Antonio Augenti, a young tenor of refined style acquired in New York churches, and a stage presence both manly and frank, made his appearance in song recital at Aeolian Hall last night, assisted at the piano by G. H. Caselotti, and in an obligato to Godard's berceuse from "Jocelyn," as well as violin solos, by Franz Kaltenborn. Mr. Augenti's songs ranged from Chadwick to Cadman, among American composers, and from an air in Italian from Donizetti's "Favorita" to "Mother o' Mine," by Tours. His singing, while that of a newcomer on the concert platform, was backed by a personality that found congenial exercise in lighter lyrics and favor with his house.

"COMMON COUNSEL."

There are labor leaders who object to Mr. GOMPERS's intimacy and influence with capitalists, and it is said that he must defend his leadership against dissension in his own ranks. Also there are others who object to the President's association with labor leaders. Those in both camps who think like that must think that the way to convince is to antagonize, and that the way to take against opposition is to exert authority. That is not the President's way. His method is that of reason—"common counsel" he called it—and his position is as strong as his reason. Nor is that only his personal position. It is the principle upon which rests the strength of our institutions. We have seen autocracy shrivel, although the powers it used were less than those now exercised among us. That is the democratic way. There is no limit to the trust democrats put in their leaders when the leaders justify it, and when they trust their leaders they will follow them "over the top" into and through whatever lies before them.

That is the sentiment to which the President appeals when he lays aside his authority and asks to be heard by his fellow-citizens, merely as one of them. When the President does this, he sets an example worthy of imitation. If there are any who seek to strengthen themselves by policies based upon force, even unlawful force, and who speak for class interests rather than as "soldiers of the common good," they must perceive by the response to the President's appeal that they weaken their position with all but their own class. The President will receive unanimous support when he declares in his address to the Federation of Labor at Buffalo:

> If we are true friends of freedom—our own or anybody else's—we will see that the power of this country, and the productivity of this country, is raised to its absolute maximum and that absolutely nobody is allowed to stand in the way of it.

It is not possible to suppose that "labor" will stand out now for an exception for the benefit of its class interests. There is a universal interest in the winning of the war, in which labor has an indivisible share incomparably greater than any increase of wages or shortening of hours which it can enforce in any other way than by imitating the President, and laying aside force in favor of reason. In so far as labor's wants are based upon reason, they will be conceded freely, even gladly. But in so far as they are based on any other ground, they will be met by opposition as strenuous as that which an aroused democracy is capable of. The nation's difficulty is not the opportunity of the unreasonable labor leader. There can be no worse time than now for pressing for settlement issues which were contentious in easier times. Those who think and say—chapter and verse can be cited—that labor will hold in peace what it gains in war are making the mistake of their lives. Labor need lose nothing by war, but it will gain no new class privilege. It will be prevented, as the President said, not > by the power of the Government, but by the power of the American spirit. Our duty, if we are to do this great thing and show America to be what we believe her to be, the greatest hope and energy of the world—then must we stand together night and day until the job is finished.

Will labor "stand together" or will it stand apart? There were those among the President's hearers who have stood apart. There were those there who have so far forgotten their reason that they have declined to abide by the arbitration of their differences with employers who have put themselves in the hands of the protectors of the common good without reserve. "This means you," said the President in more direct phrase, adding that he had it in mind to say the same thing to others. There will be the same support of it to whomever said, when there is equal reason. Labor and capital have got to do business together. The fraction of either which relies on other methods will find the coming Winters cool, and the coming Summers hotter, until the German is mastered. There will be not the slightest regard for wages, or profits, or class strategy, which shall cause our boys "over there" to die in the trenches for lack of ammunition, or food, or ships, or whatever they need that is in the power of their countrymen to give them. Billions for defense, but not a cent for tribute to unreasonable demands by any faction, is the motto of the moment. When Mr. GOMPERS says "Me too," he will deserve the cheers which the President received clamorously from Mr. GOMPERS's followers, and perhaps also from his opponents. And yet his position has been better than that of some others who ought to be named and their treachery exposed. The President spoke plainly in principle, but there is room for plainer speaking about practice. He said there ought to be no strikes without conciliation. It is officially reported that in the six months of war there have been 500 "industrial disturbances," involving 1,029,671 workers. For the same period there were 144 strikes in 1916, and too many then. There are 100 strikes now. Fifty are incapable of adjustment, forty-eight have been "quasi adjusted," according to the official summary. What labor leader will defend the facts against the President's appeal for reason, when many of the war strikes are for demands inadmissible in peace?

"JUNKERS" IN RUSSIA.

The epithet "Junkers," applied by the Bolsheviki rulers of Petrograd to the supporters of KERENSKY, is significant and revelatory. Of course, as applied to KERENSKY's followers, the word is a wild absurdity, but it is evident that the earlier epithet, "bourgeois," has lost some of its power and that a new and worse one has had to be coined for the obfuscation of the proletarian intellect. The use of this epithet indicates the nature of the struggle. The ignorant must be made to believe that mere law and order, democratic liberty without license, are synonymous with caste rule and tyranny, that there is really no difference between KERENSKY and the Kaiser. When one remembers that KERENSKY is a Socialist and that presumably his men are largely Socialists, one can form an idea of the extent to which human reason has turned topsy-turvy and lost its bearings wherever the madness of Bolshevism has burned its way. It is actually possible that the armed men who are carrying out LENINE's orders and opposing KERENSKY's march on Petrograd have been made to believe, in some dim way, that KERENSKY is a tool of Czarism.

It is encouraging, however, to note the indications that the madness thus strikingly illustrated is not the madness of Russia. There are even indications that Petrograd itself is not wholly mad. The Bolsheviki have had an immense asset in the incredible patience and slowness to action of the Russian people, and in their own entire innocence of these qualities. By attempting to overthrow KERENSKY's Government it seems possible that they have at last taken the one step which could overcome patience and stimulate slowness. Russia, it seems probable, is aroused at last; and not until she is aroused can the forces of sanity be listened to.

A SUFFRAGE TRUCE.

The "militant" woman suffragists have been making a sorry spectacle of themselves in Washington again. Another group, the Committee of a Thousand Women, mainly Socialists, whose burning patriotism was shown at a meeting in a New York public school Sunday night, where the utterance most acclaimed was talk of the "free women of the world stopping "the war by forcing the laying down "of arms," has sent a delegation to Washington to "demand that President WILSON pledge immediately his "support of the Federal suffrage "amendment as a war measure." How fond of war measures are these friends of peace! They also cry for the release of the martyred picketers. Till New York had voted for woman suffrage, it was the habit to view the picketers with alarm. Now they are victims; and the fruitless effort to force Mr. WILSON to approve the Federal amendment is to be carried on with new threats and violence.

It is not to be believed that the sane and moderate woman suffragists countenance the extremists, whose words and whose acts are sure to bring them into unpleasant familiarity with the law. Feminine disorder and sedition have been borne with altogether too much politeness and patience. The New York women, admitted to political equality, must submit to equality of treatment. They are no longer to be humored as petulant children or spared when they choose to make nuisances of themselves.

Miss ANNE MARTIN of the National Woman's Party said the other day:

> Mrs. PANKHURST lost her head and put her country before her sex.

How many suffragists are prepared to put their sex before their country? That country needs the undivided energy and labor of its people. In the shadow of disorganization and disaster in Europe, there must be a sterner concentration of purpose and work on the sole and supreme issue of winning the war. Shall democracy survive? Till that question is settled, controversy about woman suffrage or the method of securing it is striving after wind.

The woman suffrage leaders, the Woman Suffrage Party of New York, are but a part, and not the largest part, of the woman electorate of New York. The former anti-suffragists and neutrals have as much right, by force of numbers more right, to be consulted and regarded as to proposed policies. In the great States that have rejected woman suffrage in the last few years, in every State where it is not now in force by the popular vote and State Constitution, to force a Federal amendment will be to create discord and division, to divert the minds of men and women from the instant task of war. Let the long contention cease until after the war. Let anti-suffragist and pro-suffragist, postponing their debates, unite wholeheartedly for America First, for the support of the war. In the interim and during the armistice, the novices in New York will be acquiring political knowledge, experience, and habit, the successful use of which will be a far stronger and better argument than all the suasive orators of feminism could adduce. Moreover, by cordial co-operation with the active forces of patriotism, they will have laid up a store of gratitude with the nation. To ask, as some of them do, for Federal suffrage on the ground that they can't give their whole heart to the war without it, is unconsciously ungenerous. And the United States is but beginning. The woman suffragists should not seek their "reward" till they have put off their armor. They are but putting it on now.

"REFORM," BEFORE AND AFTER.

The platform of Tammany was nearly "as long as the moral law," which Tammany lives to keep. How much of it was the perfume and suppliance of the campaign? The banishment of the "Rockefeller Steel Trust" Gary plan, the favorite scarecrow of Judge HYLAN, is but a bagatelle compared with the high momentous matters to which Tammany, with its wonted grave humor, committed itself. "Specifically we are in "favor of the public ownership and "operation of all public utilities, in-"cluding traction, gas, electricity, "and the telephone."

Tammany is practical. Tammany knows that this public ownership scheme is specifically and generally impossible. If it was bait for gudgeons, they have been caught. Tammany is a stout individualist as to corporations. "A flower exists to smell, and I exist to smell it," said a Persian poet. "A corporation exists "to be milked, and we exist to milk "it," thinks Tammany.

"The present high cost of food and other necessaries," the Tammany humorists swore last August, "is "largely due to the selfishness "of this [the Rockefeller-Morgan] "group." On and after Jan. 1, 1918, that group will no longer be "in control of the affairs of the city." The "financial and social autocracy" will then be deposed. The high cost of food and other necessaries will largely go down. Note the faint but expressive flicker of Mr. MURPHY's left eyelash. Is there just as much of a sketch of a wink as consorts with judicial dignity in Judge HYLAN's left eye? "What are we here for?" The offices are the thing. As for the platform, why, as PULTENEY said of Sir ROBERT WALPOLE's Sinking Fund, "The Philosopher's Stone turns out "to be some sort of cure for the "itch."

GENERAL BELL ON THE NATIONAL ARMY.

The drafted men of the national army were all sorts and all sizes and of many races when they marched through the streets of New York on the way to Camp Upton. Their appearance elicited some compliments from the observant, but more criticism from those of little faith. How could an army be made of so many diverse elements, of such a conglomeration of humanity? Could they be licked into shape by the most patient drillmasters? Would they enter into the spirit of the service they were called to? These were some of the questions asked by the skeptical. General J. FRANKLIN BELL answered them at the Seventy-first Regiment Armory when he told an audience of 10,000 persons what had been accomplished at Yaphank with the material of the melting pot.

The General is not a courtier; he is by nature as frank as a burr. Not a word of praise about his charges could have been extracted from him had they not proved their manhood and taken naturally to soldiering. "If I know the men at Camp Upton," the General told his hearers, "it is a fighting army." It must be borne in mind that BELL is as fine an example of a fighting General as our own or any other army has. His Medal of Honor was won in the Philippine insurrection for an act of daring that evinced more of headlong bravery than of the cool judgment commonly expected of an officer; it was a charge single-handed into a band of insurgents, some of whom he shot and captured, the others being put to flight. But as MACARTHUR's chief of scouts BELL was always taking risks and showing his men how to close with the enemy and do the impossible. So he is an excellent judge of the raw material for soldiers.

General BELL's report is that the very raw material at Camp Upton has "made good" handsomely and there need be no worry about the men's behavior when they face the enemy in France. "You may rest assured," he says, "that when that army goes "across you are going to have an "army that will fight." In the Bell lexicon, that is an army that will not suffer defeat. And the reasons for his faith are that the drafted men have submitted cheerfully to discipline, have learned quickly, take an interest in their work, and are animated by the spirit that is not appalled by danger or depressed by hardship. General BELL is pleased beyond measure (and perhaps surprised) that these men of such infinite variety have neither shirked nor gone wrong. Not a court-martial for two months, he reports, with something like exultation. Enlisted men in his experience have not always been so well behaved. He rejoices that at last we have a democratic army, and it is evidently his belief that the best fighting can be got out of such an army.

There is no better critic than J. FRANKLIN BELL, who is known by his intimates to be a diligent student of the art of war as well as a fighting soldier.

NO WASTE OF FOOD.

In one day's news, a little more than a week ago, were two dispatches relating to our food supply. California, a dispatch from San Francisco said, was proud of her response to the national appeal for larger crops. Her potato fields showed an increase of 3,225,000 bushels, and there was a gain of 5,185,000 bushels in beans. A dispatch from Chicago reported that the Federal authorities there had found in the railroad yards a "hill," thirty-five feet high, of decomposing vegetables which had been thrown from cars. They also had evidence, it was asserted, that "several hundred carloads" of potatoes, onions, and beets had been allowed to freeze and rot in the yards because the cars had been held for owners who were waiting for higher prices. In last Sunday's TIMES Senator BORAH, who recently returned to Washington from a three weeks' tour in the West, asserted that large quantities of potatoes and fruit were rotting on the farms because they could not be carried to market. For this reason the farmers were giving no weight to arguments for conservation and even greater crops next year.

Is it true that the nation is losing much of the year's supply of food because it is rotting on farms or at railroad terminals? We have published special reports from several cities concerning the transportation of vegetables. They do not confirm Senator BORAH's statements or the dispatch of the 3d inst. from Chicago. Vegetables have been thrown away in that city's railroad yards because they had been frozen in transit. St. Louis says crops are moving freely and without waste. Cleveland reports little loss or delay, although there are not enough cars. In Pittsburgh's car yards there has been loss because much more was received than could be marketed. In the East there has been little waste. Railroad companies have insisted upon prompt unloading by wholesale merchants. If in some places transportation has been delayed, this is not surprising, for the Railroad War Board says 750,000 cars are required for moving the great crop of potatoes.

All should strive to prevent waste. Millions of housewives in their food card pledges have undertaken to do this. Our people must have in mind not only the needs of our allies in Europe and the exports that will be required for American soldiers, but also the destruction of food here by agents of Germany. Food losses due to incendiary fires are estimated to have been $9,500,000 in October. Mr. HOOVER has given warning of a "widespread conspiracy" to reduce our food supply by burning stockyards and grain warehouses. The railroads are working diligently under severe pressure, carrying much more freight than at any time in the past, and with a very slight increase of rolling stock. If there is delay in moving food, we may be sure that it cannot be avoided, and it should make a conclusive argument for action by the Commerce Commission that will enable the companies to buy all the cars that are needed.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

How Germany's Plotters Were Foiled.

That English officer who was quoted, some time ago, as saying that modern war is "dirty, dull, and dangerous"—with, of course, the inevitable British intensifier before each epithet—described accurately enough the trench fighting with which he was familiar. Not quite all of modern war, however, compares so ill with the war of other days in supplying romance and excitement, as well as danger, and, though what used to be called "gay trappings" have now almost everywhere given place to uniforms devised with a view to conferring "low visibility," material is still supplied for tales as well worth telling as any that have come down from the days when knighthood was or claimed to be in flower.

Surely, no chronicler with a taste for the adventurous could ask for better stuff out of which to build his tales than was to be found in the story printed by THE TIMES on Sunday about the silent campaign against German spies and plotters that the navy, with a hastily gathered fleet of old and new boats, all small, has been waging for months past on the Great Lakes and in the straits connecting them. A truly remarkable narrative it was, and highly reassuring, too, for those of us who have occasionally made, from our little knowledge of what was doing to guard the country from its inner enemies, the rash assumption that little had been done.

The protective agencies of the Government have not yet succeeded, indeed, in creating safety for all our military industries and storehouses, but at least they have accomplished the enormously important task of keeping open the water highway through the lakes, and have done it in spite of the fact that the plotters fully realized the possibility, by exploding a few pounds of dynamite at any one of a few just right places along that highway, of helping Germany and hurting the Allies more than by almost any number of successful schemings elsewhere. So there they have labored with industry and devotion, but, thanks to the naval patrol of the lakes, all that they have as yet accomplished has been to get over 600 members of their army into prison, and not a few of them shot or drowned.

As the historian of this phase of the war put it, they have been beaten at their own game, and the German Secret Service has failed to demonstrate its boasted superiority.

He Accepts a Great Responsibility.

That Chicago doctor whose curiously persistent ill-luck it has been frequently to get his name into the newspapers as doing in his professional domain things that shock the sensibilities of the general public, has again been pursued—and as usual overtaken—by the fate which dogs him with such thought-provoking pertinacity.

In the past, when what and all he did was to refuse to prolong by surgical or other means the lives of babies obviously doomed at birth to brief existence as monsters and idiots, the arguments by which he defended his course were not without weight, and his more reasonable critics found fault with him chiefly because he started, or allowed to be started, nation-wide discussion of a subject better kept strictly within professional circles. There it can be handled, as it always has been, with due sense of moral responsibility, but without the horrified exclamations of unenlightened sentimentality.

But the latest reports from the hospital where this publicity-haunted doctor reigns reveal him as playing an active instead of passive rôle in dealing with the problem of prolonging lives in his judgment worthless—as settling as well as raising again the wearisome question of "euthanasia"—the question wearisome because settled against him a thousand times—whether the physician is ever justified in gently easing out of existence a patient seemingly doomed soon to die of a cruelly painful malady. That in absolutely no cases would this be, if not justifiable, at least excusable, there might be some hesitation in asserting, but the most confident of adverse prognoses have so often been refuted by recovery and survival that the next to unanimous agreement of medical as of lay opinion is that the doctor's business always is to prolong life, never to shorten it.

Certainly the law has only one rule—the deliberate and intentional taking of any human life not forfeited to the State by heinous crime, and not in defense of human life, is murder and punishable as such, no matter by whom done. That punishment, if the Chicago dispatches are true, the physician under consideration has risked by administering lethal doses of narcotics to an aged victim of cancer.

Conscripts Here Are Not Slaves.

Just why the conscription of labor would be "slavery" it is impossible to see. At any rate, it is an impossibility unless those men who are conscripted for service in the army are also "slaves."

Much work of many kinds is not less necessary to the successful conduct of war than is the manning of trenches or the making of charges against the enemy in the field, and the demerits of a voluntary system of war work behind the lines are the same as those which moved the country to get its soldiers by conscription when the number of volunteers proved inadequate for its purposes.

The conscript is a slave of a sort when his service is imposed by a despot. It is quite different when it is imposed by a representative government, expressing the popular will in the only way that will can be expressed in a country as large as this one. It is not slavery to submit to the decision of the majority, acting constitutionally and lawfully.

That is the only kind of conscription for either laborers or soldiers we could possibly have, and the minority, no matter how displeased or unwilling, is without a real or just grievance.

The Proof of the Pudding.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Some of us who voted "No" on woman suffrage are wondering how some of those who voted "Yes" are feeling about the prompt development of suffrage attitude as expressed in the meeting of last Sunday evening at Public School 40. The ladies who know "gosh dern well" that they will control votes enough to down their judicious friend President Wilson and to carry socialism and stop the war do not seem to promise the betterment of the country.

A SANE AMERICAN.

New York, Nov. 10, 1917.

Something in a Name.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In the issue of your paper several days ago you informed your readers that the real name of Trotzky was Braunstein, which conveys to the American mind a clearer insight into his aims and ambitions. There is something in a name.

AN AMERICAN WOMAN.

New York, Nov. 12, 1917.

A MOTHER'S PRAYER.

Men wonder as they see me still and calm and smiling
As I go about my work.
They know that I have lost my son, my only child,
And I a widow.
How much more would they marvel did they know
That in my heart there lives this hymn of praise:—
"God has been merciful to me!"

They do not know—thank God! how few have known!—
The weakness that had led my boy away
Down dark bypaths of evil for a time;
That though he had come back to me, repentant,
A shadow lay across the coming years,
Lest he lack strength to fight his curse, inherited.

So, when his heart flamed high with zeal
In those first days of war, I let him go,
And trusted over there he might grow strong
For the long combat with his baser self.

Now I am left to face the years alone!
Yet nothing now can take from me the priceless boon
Of his dear letters! Nor the words his Captain wrote:
"There was no finer man in all the regiment—
So self-contained, so resolute, so kind."
And so my pain is stilled in thankfulness.
"God has been merciful to him—and me."

CHINA NOW OFFERS PROTEST TO LANSING

Cables Formal Objection to the Agreement Negotiated with Viscount Ishii.

RESENTS BEING IGNORED

Stand with Allies Not Affected—Preparations to Send Chinese Expedition to France.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—A protest against the understanding reached recently between the United States and Japan regarding China was presented to the State Department today by the Chinese Government through the medium of its Legation in Washington. It is understood that the protest follows the same lines as the one which China has just presented at Tokio to Viscount Motono, the Japanese Foreign Minister. China considers that both Japan and the United States have transcended their legitimate spheres in making China the subject of conversations affecting her status, and has taken umbrage at the negotiation of the agreement without being consulted.

It was learned today that China's Foreign Office refused to accept as accurate the press reports of the agreement and would not believe the Ishii-Lansing understanding had been negotiated until the fact was officially confirmed. Confirmation was obtained from the Chinese Legation here and also from United States Minister Reinsch, at Peking, who delivered to the Chinese Foreign Office a copy of the statement issued by Secretary Lansing when announcement was made here of the signing of the agreement.

Theory Is Dangerous, China Holds.

Behind the Chinese objection to the manner in which the American-Japanese understanding was negotiated is the view that it is an unjust and dangerous theory that any nation has a right to assert a claim to special interests in another country without the latter's consent. Secretary Lansing, in his statement announcing the agreement by which Japan's special interest in China is recognized and both countries reaffirm the "open door" policy and pledge the independence and territorial integrity of China, made it clear that the United States always has recognized and has asserted for itself special interests in another country based upon propinquity. The Chinese Government is understood to be unwilling to subscribe to such a doctrine.

Intimations that have come from Peking that the legality in international law of the agreement might be called in question because it had not been submitted to the American Senate in the form of a treaty have made little impression upon officials here. They are satisfied that the understanding is of the same nature as the Root-Takahira agreement which adjusted the questions arising from the immigration into the United States of Japanese coolie labor. This agreement never was submitted to the Senate, nor will that made by Mr. Lansing and Viscount Ishii be laid before that body, except perhaps for information. The Administration view is said to be that prolonged and useless discussion of American relations with the Orient would be the only outcome of a different course.

Preparing Troops for Allies.

Meanwhile, there is no weakening in China's preparations to render effective aid to the cause of the Allies. The statement was made in an authoritative quarter today that the Peking Government is preparing to send an expeditionary force to France. A commission, reported to be economic, which has just arrived in this country from China, will not stay in America, but will proceed to England and France. There has been an element of mystery in connection with the visit of this mission, composed of eight persons. It had been supposed that they were coming to Washington to confer with the authorities, but whatever was the original plan concerning them, it was learned on the highest authority that they will proceed to Europe. There are already in France and England more than fifty Chinese officers, who are making preliminary studies of the situation with a view of arranging for a Chinese expedition to France. Both the numerical strength and the character of Chinese troops to be dispatched to France are military secrets.

There are in France large numbers of Chinese skilled and unskilled laborers, but the majority of these were contracted for before China entered the war, and were actually in Europe before she severed relations with the Central Powers.

It was hinted today that China is looking to England and France for making the financial arrangements which will be necessary before she can send troops abroad. France and England are members of the four-power loan group, in which for several months Japan has assumed the leadership by reason of her financial situation.

China has desired financial assistance from the United States, but whether she has met with any success in informal inquiries is not known. An attaché of the Ishii mission stated while the mission was in Washington that Japan would oppose any loan by the United States to China if the money was to be put to political uses. Japan, he said, was in a position to afford China whatever financial aid she needed.

2,520 'NEWSIES' IN SERVICE.

Flag Unfurled in Front of Brace Memorial Home.

Patriotic speeches by the newly elected Tammany candidates for city offices were made yesterday at the unfurling of a service flag with 2,520 stars in front of the Brace Memorial Newsboys' Home, at 14 Chambers Street. In a letter regretting his absence, Judge Hylan said:

"My own career, made possible by the things these boys are fighting to preserve, moves me to a very thorough appreciation of the service tendered by those whom you honor today. Adversity in America did not blind them to the opportunity in America. All their lives ran through adversity, and without thought of self they have contributed a living shield between their nation and adversity. Hope was their only asset, and that asset stands or falls with democracy."

Sheriff "Al" Smith, who was introduced as "one of the greatest men New York City has ever produced," said:

"There are only two classes of people in the country today—the man who is with his country and the man who is against it. There will be two classes of people in this country after the war—the man who did his bit and the man who did not. The one will be like Nathan Hale, proud of his ability to serve and regretting that he had only one life to devote to his country, and the other will be like Benedict Arnold."

CONFER ON PAPER PRICES.

Differences Here and in Canada Discussed by Commissioners.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—Differences in the prices of news print paper in Canada and the United States were discussed at the Federal Trade Commission offices today, at a conference attended by Commissioner Colver and Robert A. Pringle, the Canadian pulp and paper Commissioner; R. W. Breaden of Ottawa, Commissioner of Taxation, and Thomas P. Owen, member of the Canadian House of Commons.

Paper in the United States is selling at about $3.25 a hundred pounds, and in Canada at about $2.50. Much of it is imported and there is rivalry between Canadian manufacturers as to which shall have the advantage of the higher price. There are differences in the cost accounting systems used by the United States and Canada.

RUSHES SHIPYARDS WORK.

Board Seeks Homes and Transportation for More Men.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—The United States Shipping Board today took further steps to speed up the shipbuilding program, and get a small army of new employes to fill the gaps in the big shipyards.

Better housing and transportation facilities are to be provided for the workmen, as complaints have been received from some of the shipyard districts that it would be difficult to provide the proper accommodations for enough men to put on double and triple shifts.

J. Rogers Flannery of Pittsburgh has been drafted from the ranks of the Red Cross by Chairman Hurley of the Shipping Board to take charge of this work, and submitted his first report today on conditions in Baltimore, so that additional men who are badly needed at the Sparrows Point yards can be provided for at once.

Within a short time Mr. Flannery will extend his investigations to other Atlantic Coast cities. He soon will visit New York and Newark to take up the question of providing homes and commutation facilities for men who will be employed at the big fabricating plant of the Submarine Boat Corporation, which is being constructed on Newark Bay.

In Baltimore Mr. Flannery arranged for a canvass of the city to obtain a list of all vacant houses and determine the number of families willing to rent quarters to workers. As soon as this list is obtained, the further question of building homes, if such a step is necessary, will be taken up.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Companay and electric railroads were called upon to co-operate by providing additional service and low commutation rates, and thorough co-operation was promised. The Pennsylvania Railroad offered a commutation rate for the workmen of $1.35 a week, the distance from Baltimore to the shipyards being eleven miles. A conference has been arranged for Tuesday by the Mayor to take up the entire situation.

Such methods will be adopted in regard to obtaining the needed facilities in all other centres of population near shipyards, the requests being fitted to the conditions. New York and Newark probably will be asked to prepare to supply the homes and railroad service.

The Council of National Defense also has taken up consideration of the housing problem, and has offered as a suggestion that concerns which take Government contracts and provide homes for workmen be remunerated by the Government if additional expense is incurred. It is probable that such a plan will be adopted in the general movement to rush the shipbuilding work.

Charles Piese, the new Vice President of the Emergency Fleet Corporation, was at his desk this morning ready to give all of his energy to the task of putting efficiency and drive into the program. He will work in co-operation with Rear Admiral Capps, General Manager of the corporation, and Chairman Hurley.

MURPHY PUSHES LIBEL SUIT

Complaint Filed in Action Against The Press Publishing Co.

The complaint in the $500,000 libel suit of Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany Hall, against the Press Publishing Company, because of the publication in The Evening World, on Oct. 22 last, of an editorial containing alleged remarks by ex-Chief of Police William S. Devery concerning Mr. Murphy, was field yesterday in the Supreme Court by Olcott, Bonyngo, McManus & Ernst.

The complaint alleges that Mr. Murphy "has been for many years continuously a resident of the City of New York and has had continuously for many years past numerous friends, acquaintances, and business associates in the said City of New York and State of New York and throughout the United States of America."

The complaint quotes the alleged libelous article, and alleges that "the statements set forth purport to connect the plaintiff with certain poolrooms, amounting to charges that the plaintiff had been guilty of crimes and of violations of the penal law and the Penal Code." The complaint is signed by Mr. Murphy.

MRS. BLATCH TO WOMEN.

Elections Won't Win the War or Save the World—Shelve Them.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

My name appears in connection with the suffrage meeting held last night at one of the public schools. I was not at the meeting and had no association whatsoever with the Committee of One Thousand which organized the meeting. And my sole relation to the proposed deputation was that on Friday I was asked to join a delegation of voting women which was to wait on the President and ask for the Federal suffrage amendment. I promised to consider the matter. On Saturday I called up the Chairman of the committee and one other member and informed both that I could not be one of the deputation. Since last February I have taken little part in suffrage work, having devoted my time mainly to matters connected with war service.

To judge by the hue and cry that is going on about non-essentials one might suppose that America is at peace, the world at peace, starvation non-existent, and civilization progressing normally.

In New York State, it seems to me, each woman should politically do two things: First, go in orderly fashion into the party which best reflects her opinions; second, join a non-partisan group which in scholarly fashion would weigh facts and crystallize judgment. To endeavor to hold women as a mass outside the existing parties is as futile as unwise. Women have always had a voice in the management of the Socialist Party. They are already inside. It is suicidal, then, to advise the women of other parties to remain outside party lines as a group of balancing dilettanti. Political parties are not bands of ravening wolves. They are made up of average human beings. It would be well for women to join the party of their predilection because one can only learn to swim by getting into the water, and because in their battle for enfranchisement women have had too long a schooling in separation from men and cannot too quickly learn the value of standing politically shoulder to shoulder with them.

And, then, we might, both men and women, pause a moment and find ourselves. If we did, I am sure we would conclude that primaries and registrations and elections, which are occupying so much thought, are non-essentials in the present world crisis. Were all wiped off the slate, it would be a blessing. I doubt if there is a legislative body or an executive officer from the Atlantic to the Pacific, from Washington to the tiniest village, that is too bad to serve the purposes of the people. We might well knock along with what we have in the way of elective officers and give our strength to the mighty problems on our hands.

There is war, there is starvation threatening vast areas, civilization is in danger. Those who are in favor of the war can centre their strength on winning it, those who cannot see what the battle means can centre their energy on questions of food, sanitation, education, health—all those things, in short, which will husband the race.

Elections won't win the war or save the world. Suppose we temporarily lay them, with all their diverting turmoil, on the shelf.

$1,600,000 STARTS Y. M. C. A. WAR FUND

Rockefeller Foundation Gives First Million Toward the $35,000,000 Sought.

$350,000 FROM J. P. MORGAN

Thousands of Committees in the United States Expect to Raise the Money in Seven Days.

Beginning a nation-wide campaign to raise $35,000,000 for the extension of Y. M. C. A. work among the soldiers and sailors of the United States and her allies on the various fronts of Europe, the National War Work Council of the association yesterday made a big stride toward its goal by receiving in this city alone a total of $1,600,000 in three large contributions. Of this sum, $1,000,000 was contributed by the Rockefeller Foundation with the assurance that the donation would be increased to one-tenth of the total sum subscribed, or $3,500,000, if the total amount sought for is finally obtained. The other two large gifts were $350,000 from J. P. Morgan & Co., and $250,000 from the Standard Oil Company.

The campaign will last seven days. More than 300,000 volunteer workers were put into action in not less than 15,000 cities and towns of the country. Practically every city and large town in the United States is actively engaged in piling up the fund needed by the Y. M. C. A. According to the present plan, the average amount that must be raised during the seven days is $5,000,000 a day.

Reports received from all parts of the country at the headquarters of the National War Work Council at 124 East Twenty-eighth Street, yesterday showed that the campaign had taken a good start. More than 1,400 leading business men of Chicago launched the campaign at the Hotel La Salle. They personally pledged themselves to contribute $1,500,000 of Chicago's allotment of $3,000,000. The State of Delaware reported a total contribution of $350,000 on the first day of the campaign, $250,000 having been contributed by the du Pont de Nemours Powder Company. Inasmuch as Delaware's quota was originally fixed at $300,000, the Y. M. C. A. War Work Committee of that State increased its goal to $500,000.

Outside of New York City, Cleveland, according to reports received up to 6 P. M., $719,151. From many other cities the national committee received gratifying reports, which indicated clearly that the people of the country were determined to give the Y. M. C. A. appeal for funds a generous and full hearted response. Col. Lewis, the machine gun inventor, at a meeting at Montclair, N. J., contributed $35,000.

The first gun of the campaign in New York was fired at a luncheon at the Bankers' Club, where the local solicitors were assembled to receive their final instructions from Charles S. Ward, general campaign director, and George W. Perkins, general chairman of the city campaign. It was at the luncheon that the Rockefeller, Morgan and Standard Oil contributions were announced. These were in addition to the donations made by the du Pont Company and the International Harvester Company, which had already been made public. W. M. Kingsley presided at the luncheon. Mr. Ward reported that one-fourth of the States had asked for an increase in their allotments.

"While these reports are indications of great enthusiasm all over the country," said Mr. Ward, "they should not be taken to mean that the fund is already oversubscribed. The money is still to be raised and every effort should be made to bring the campaign to a successful culmination within seven days' time."

The women solicitors of the campaign were given their final instructions yesterday at the home of Mrs. Arthur Curtiss James, at 39 East Sixty-ninth Street. The Women's Committee expects to raise $2,000,000 of the $9,000,000 which comprises New York City's quota. By this morning several hundred campaigners will be out seeking contributions of $1,000 and upward from selected lists of names. Gifts of any size, however, will be welcome, and checks may be sent to Cleveland H. Dodge, Treasurer, 215 West Twenty-third Street.

It was learned yesterday that fake solicitors clad in the uniform of United States soldiers were endeavoring to collect money for the Y. M. C. A. fund. The public is warned against the activities of these men. No small gifts are being solicited through canvassers except from members of the organization, and all solicitors will have proper credentials if they are from the Y. M. C. A.

PRINCETON MEN HONORED.

Win French War Cross for Gallant Work in Transporting Munitions.

SOISSONS, France, Nov. 12.—Robert Patterson Lamont, Jr., and Henry Thompson, both of New York, today received the War Cross with Palms for bravery in transporting munitions under heavy bombardment in the recent French offensive on the Chemin des Dames. Lamont also received the Military Medal, the highest purely military distinction in the French Army.

The automobile transport which Lamont and Thompson were driving was struck by a German shell. Lamont's left hand was nearly blown off, and its amputation was necessary. He also received other severe wounds. Thompson was wounded badly.

R. T. Scully, a Princeton graduate and leader of the camion section, also received the War Cross for his action in binding Lamont's wounds and rushing him and Thompson to a hospital. His action probably saved Lamont's life.

All three men are members of the American Field Service.

BOSTON, Nov. 12.—American Field service headquarters here received word from Paris today that Robert Patterson Lamont, Jr., of Evanston, Ill., and Henry Thompson of Greenville, Del., Princeton students, who were wounded on Oct. 7, while carrying shells to an advanced post, had been decorated for bravery. Both of the young men, who are 19 years of age, went to France last May as members of the Transport Branch of the Field Service.

While transporting munitions at midnight the road was bombarded by the enemy, but Lamont and Thompson, the report stated, showed little regard for their personal safety in an effort to reach the advanced post. None of the others in the convoying party was hurt.

BUY "HERO LAND" TICKETS.

Banks Contribute to Success of Exhibit for War-Stricken.

The four-day ticket drive for "Hero Land," which is to open at the Grand Central Palace on Nov. 24, ends today, and the heads of the various committees will assemble at a luncheon at the Ritz-Carlton at noon to report the result of their work.

J. P. Morgan & Co. yesterday purchased 20,000 tickets, and the Harriman National Bank 1,000 tickets to be distributed among its employes. Miss Eleanor Sears took 1,000 tickets, which she will sell among her friends in Boston. Mrs. Harry Guggenheim and Mrs. H. B. Schelheimer, who have been working as a special committee, yesterday reported that they had sold more than 7,000 tickets in seven hours.

Emphasis is being laid by the women ticket sellers on the fact that there will be no solicitation of funds or attempts to make people buy articles at the exhibit.

Work has begun on the wooden structure which is to house the British tank recently used in the Liberty Loan parade.

As the children of France need candy and stockings and toys for Christmas cheer, the American Fund for French Wounded will offer for sale from a Christmas tree stockings filled with candy and toys, which may be sent to France. The American Fund for French Wounded supplies 4,000 hospitals in France, in addition to building up the devastated Aisne and Somme districts.

OUR ANTHEM SUNG AT OPERA OPENING

Caruso and Other Principals of "Aida" Stir Vast Throng at Metropolitan.

INAUGURAL IS BRILLIANT

Laurels for Mme. Matzenauer, Miss Claudia Muzio, Amato, and Mardones, a Newcomer.

AIDA—Opera in four acts and seven scenes. Book by A. Ghislanzoni, (in Italian.) Music by Giuseppi Verdi.

The King	Basil Ruysdael
Amneris	Margarete Matzenauer
Aida	Claudia Muzio
Radames	Enrico Caruso
Ramfis	Jose Mardones
Amonasro	Pasquale Amato
A Messenger	Pietro Audisio
A Priestess	Marie Sundelius

Conductor, Roberto Moranzoni.

The season at the Metropolitan Opera House opened last evening with all the brilliancy and sumptuousness that have characterized opening nights in piping times of peace. The opera was "Aida," wherein the management is enabled to put forward all that it can offer in magnificence in singing and in scenic setting. It was a choice whose wisdom has been confirmed by experience, and which at the present time is based on the best assured grounds. There was a very large audience present, one of the largest that the house can hold; one to whom the war tax was as an unconsidered trifle.

The patriotic moment came, as it comes at the beginning of every musical undertaking of these days. It was at the end of the second act, a patriotic moment in the opera when Radames has made his victorious return. The curtain fell at the close of the act and was immediately raised again, when the principals were discovered at the front of the stage prepared to sing "The Star-Spangled Banner," Mr. Caruso being prepared with a copy of the words, the others carrying them in their memories. The national air was sung and played with much fervor.

New Italian Conductor.

The performance in its principal outlines was one that has been heard and admired before in the Metropolitan Opera House. The new Italian conductor, Mr. Roberto Moranzoni, made a distinctly favorable impression as a musician of ardent temperament, intent upon bringing out the dramatic nuances, the dramatic contrasts of the score; but not disposed to let the orchestra usurp more than its rightful place in the ensemble. Mr. Moranzoni was not making his first appearance in New York, and those who had heard him conduct performances of the Boston Opera Company in this city were prepared to find him a conductor of experience, authority, and temperament. There are more sides of his art that must be made known here before his powers as a conductor can be fully known; but his first appearance was enough to predispose his listeners in his favor.

Mr. Caruso, Mme. Matzenauer, Mr. Amato, Miss Muzio, are no new aspirants for the favor of this public in "Aida." They have been admired in the past as they were last evening. It cannot be said that Mr. Caruso was in his best voice, but he, as well as Mr. Amato, sang with power and dramatic intensity. Mme. Matzenauer's Amneris is admirable in voice, and Miss Muzio continued to fulfill the promises of a useful career that she made last season.

Jose Mardones as Ramfis.

There was a new Ramfis, Mr. José Mardones, who disclosed a voice of excellent quality, and who bade fair to fill an important place in the company. Mr. Ruysdael, who has long been a member of it, is not a familiar figure in the cast of "Aida." He took the part of the King, and both in appearance and in his singing he was successful.

The singing of the chorus was excellent, and the spectacular features of this opera were made the most of, as they so often have been before.

SOCIETY MUCH IN GRAY.

Blaze of Jewels Dimmed by War—Two Mayors in Boxes.

The boxes at the opera last night shimmered in soft, subdued lights, the blaze of jewels of peaceful and neutral days having been dimmed by war. Some black and white was worn and much gray and rose and green, the effect of costumes being broken by an occasional gleam of diamonds here and there and the dull lustre of pearls.

Two Mayors witnessed the opening from the boxes, Mayor Mitchel being the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Otto H. Kahn in Box 14, while Mayor-elect John F. Hylan and Mrs. Hylan, with their daughter, Miss Virginia Hylan, occupied Box 38 in the grand tier, just three removed above where the present Mayor sat.

A noticeable feature in the parterre row was the knitting for the soldiers between the acts by Mrs. Forsythe Wicks and Mrs. Ambrose Monell, in Box 25.

Mrs. Mitchel wore black silk net over dahlia-colored satin. Mrs. Kahn, her hostess, was in French blue, with pearls. Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson, who was in the party, was in oyster gray satin, with pearls, and carried a green feather fan.

Mrs. Hylan was in jetted black net over cerise. Miss Virginia Hylan wore a girlish frock of palest blue and silver.

Mrs. Huntington in Astor Box.

With Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Astor both abroad in war work, Box 7 was occupied by the latter's grandmother, Mrs. Robert P. Huntington, Sr., who had as her guests Mrs. Charles Senff, Captain and Mrs. Metcalfe, Mr. Coffin, and Mr. Boorsem. Mrs. Huntington was in black velvet and ermine furs, and Mrs. Senff wore pale blue and silver.

Box 31, owned by Mrs. Vanderbilt, was occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Grand d'Hauteville and Mr. and Mrs. William Glyn. Mrs. d'Hauteville was in white veiled with black, and Mrs. Glyn wore white satin and silver.

Box 1, owned by Mrs. Ogden Goelet, had Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Murray Butler, Miss Sarah S. Butler and Mrs. Dulaney Howland. Mrs. Butler was in black, and her daughter in turquoise blue, while Mrs. Howland wore black.

Mr. and Mrs. M. Orme Wilson had as their guest in Box 3 Mrs. Orme Wilson, Jr., and Mrs. Richard Aldrich. Mr. and Mrs. Edward R. GREAT VOICES IN ANTHEM.

$12,000 Worth of Golden Tone in America's Song at Opera.

Midway in the first night's opera the Metropolitan "did its bit" last night at performing the national anthem, until crowds in the street caught the echo. Mr. Gatti-Casazza vindicated his pro-Ally sympathies as an Italian impresario by staging America's special song on a bigger scale than had been done in a theatre yet, with a volume of great voices worthy of the premier opera house of the world.

There was $12,000 worth of golden tone, equal to many evenings' war tax, when stars, chorus, and orchestra joined together in a last "land of the free," Caruso alone holding a prompt book while he sang, never so earnestly, and taking his high Cs, which some said were just B flats, one after another, in that closing refrain. Muzio and Matzenauer, both letter perfect, and the former Austrian contralto in especial sending her English words clear to the gallery, were supported at extreme right and left by Amato and Mardones. Conductor Moranzoni even joined in the last recalls.

Many allied officers were guests in the boxes, a Gordon Highlander for one, while a host of plain American fighting men were with their friends in all parts of the house. One reputed well-to-do sailor was first on the standees' line from the noon hour yesterday, out on Broadway.

Two subways have been decked over and the streets restored from the condition of barricades that prevailed for the last two seasons; so the 600 limousines found better going last night, and a first-night house has not been earlier seated in years. Nearly half the boxes were occupied, which has rarely happened, when Caruso at 8:05 o'clock sang his "Celeste Aida" air. There was little delay for the crowd and none for subscribers because of the new war tax.

ELSIE JANIS AT THE PALACE.

Beatrice Herford and Sallie Fisher Also On an Excellent Bill.

The final appearance of Elsie Janis in these parts prior to her departure for London are being made this week at the Palace and the Riverside Theatres. Miss Janis repeats, with some slight variations, the imitations which she gave upon her re-entrance into vaudeville in the Spring, culminating in the Will Rogers-Fred Stone impersonation.

An exceptionally good program at the Palace also includes Beatrice Herford, who, for her second week at that institution, revives three characterizations which have done valiant service in the past. Among others on the bill are Clare Kummer's playlet, "The Choir Rehearsal," with Sallie Fisher still in the leading rôle, and the irrepressible Dooleys.

Margaret Hill McCarter's
NEW NOVEL
Vanguards of the Plains
A Romance of the Santa Fe Trail
The true romance of empire building, the splendor of the faith and patriotism which carried the flag westward—these are among the instant appeals which come straight to every American reader from the pages of this epic of the Great Trail. Living close beside the ancient Trail, realizing the romance of the country of the Trail as no one else has pictured it, Mrs. McCarter has dramatized for the first time the strange history of the great highway which led from the New World to the Old.
From the old frontier of American advance, to the transplanted Old Spain in the far Southwest passed caravans and pioneers, guarded by the supermen of the plains, harried by the fierce red Arabs of the prairies, fighting for life, and for love, for liberty of trade, and for the flag which was raised at last at the end of the Great Trail.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Improvement in Italian and Russian Situation Reflected in Higher Quotations.

How closely Wall Street is watching the critical developments in Europe was shown yesterday by an immediate response in the various markets to the better news from Russia. The stock market was quietly strong throughout the session with fair-sized gains for most issues. Activity was considerably curtailed, as has happened repeatedly before when prices have turned upward.

In financial circles a great deal of confidence is felt in the ability of the Allies to reinforce the Italian defensive in time to hold Mackensen's army in check. The weakness of the Russian revolutionary forces is apparently much greater than any one had expected, and the indications that Kerensky may be able to rally the army behind him were immediately reflected in a marked recovery in ruble bonds. Foreign exchange rates on Scandinavian points fell sharply, giving further indications of lessening tension over the possibility of new complications which threatened to embarrass the Allies.

The foreign Government bonds dealt in on the Exchange all showed the influence of the more favorable aspect of the war news and several issues, notably the French cities and Anglo-French 5s, enjoyed a quick rally. The Liberty 3½s just touched their previous low record at 99.26, the new 4s receding slightly to 99.96.

The undertone in the financial district has been undergoing a steady change for the better for several days past and the outlook is much more hopeful. The improvement has not been manifested so much by a recovery in prices on the Stock Exchange as by the more optimistic note in discussions of the difficulties against which the allied nations are struggling. The address delivered by the President before the annual convention of the American Federation of Labor at Buffalo yesterday fitted in nicely with the new spirit with which bankers are regarding their obligations toward this Government's munitions and shipping needs. The labor problem is the most serious obstacle in the way of bringing American industries up to the mark set for them by the Federal authorities. Mr. Wilson's reference to the reactionary spirit which he has found among some employers probably came as a surprise to most people, who had taken at their face value the protestations of manufacturers to the effect that their plants are at the absolute disposal of he Government for the duration of the war. Some reports have reached Wall Street of stubborn opposition on the part of employers in some centres to every proposed change supposed to be favored by the labor unions, but for the most part the industrial leaders of the country are sacrificing selfish interests to make their plants count as heavily as possible in the winning of the war, and the issue raised by the President may serve to bring about still better co-operation between capital and labor.

STEADY TONE IN LONDON.

Money Is in Fair Supply and Discount Rates Are Quiet.

LONDON, Nov. 12.—Pending a clearer situation in Italy and Russia dealings narrowed on the Stock Exchange today, but the tone was steady. Consols and the war loan were inclined to harden and the foreign section was firm, while Russian bonds and mines were better with the improvements in Russian exchange, which was quoted at 370. Shipping shares were irregular.

Money was in fair supply and discount rates were quiet. A further batch of Russian credit bills was delivered on the market.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Where the Stocks Are Going.

The Steel Corporation's record of stockholders at the end of the last quarter showed that the proportion of common stock in investors' hands was larger on Sept. 30 than three months before. That is, investors held more stock than at the end of the preceding quarter, which meant a corresponding reduction of the amount of stock in brokers' offices. Presumably, investors bought more stock while Steel was declining than they sold, which has been a frequent occurrence in falling markets of the past. The Odd Lot Review reports that in last week's break there were 50 per cent. more buyers of small lots than there were sellers. Some light on the problem of where the stocks have been going may be shed by these developments.

Foreign Government Bonds Improve.

There was marked improvement yesterday in the prices for foreign Government securities. The Anglo-French 5s, which last week made a new low record by selling at 89½, advanced yesterday to 90⅝, closing at 90¼; while the three French cities—Lyons, Marseilles, and Bordeaux—moved up about 2 points, compared with the low point of 82½, reached last week. They fluctuated from 83 to 85, and closed at 84½. The City of Paris 6s, which dropped to 83 in the slump last week, moved up to 84, and closed at 83⅝. The Russian ruble 5½ per cent. bonds advanced yesterday to $120, compared with $104, the price at which sales were made last week.

Liberty Bonds Decline.

The new 4 per cent. Liberty Loan bonds, which sold below par for the first time on Saturday—a transaction being recorded at 99.98—declined yesterday to 99.96. The 3½ per cent. Liberty bonds, which, if sent in for conversion will begin to carry 4 per cent. on Thursday, sold yesterday as low as 99.26, the low record made last week. The New York City 4¼ per cents of 1960 closed yesterday at 94½, off 1¼ points from Saturday's final figure.

Cotton Here and in Liverpool.

The behavior of the cotton market yesterday afforded a concrete manifestation of a better feeling regarding the ocean transport and tonnage situation. Of late, when Liverpool prices for cotton have gone soaring, the local market has refused to respond, apparently on the theory that Liverpool bidding was more due to import scarcity and high freight rates than to actual supply and demand. If this theory had been borne out, it would have given reason for the most pessimistic view, not only as to cotton, but what is more important as to the general war situation. When local prices started up yesterday in step with Liverpool's advance, therefore, it had a very cheering effect among observers. People forgot their indignation with Southern cotton hoarders and looked hopefully upon the world once more.

Anaconda's Production Expands.

The copper trade received with a great deal of satisfaction yesterday news that the Anaconda Company's chief producing mine had been reopened. Besides indicating a substantial increase in production, the renewal of operations in the main shaft was considered as evidence that the copper situation was easing. It is expected that by the end of the current month the Anaconda properties will be working at around 90 per cent. of capacity, which will mean that they have recovered well from the strike of last Summer. While increased production is looked for in the major camps during the Winter, the commercial consumers are not yet able to look ahead to an abundance of supplies for their needs. The Distribution Committee is busy daily, directing where copper shall go. There would be no need for the committee's existence if there were plenty of metal for all comers.

Chile Copper's Big Output.

The Chile Copper Company reports that its mines turned out 9,050,000 pounds of copper in October, compared with 3,294,000 pounds in September. This would appear like a tremendous increase if consideration were not paid to the fact that in September the output was exceptionally small, due to a shortage of necessary supplies in that month. The October production, however, was the largest for a single month of the year, being more than 1,000,000 pounds in excess of the August outturn and approximately 335,000 pounds better than the total for March, which, by the way, was the best previous month since the company began operations.

The St. Paul Dividends.

With Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul common selling at 37, and the preferred at 77, yesterday, the story went around that the Directors had decided to pass the dividend, on both the common and the preferred. The only difficulty in the way of this story was the fact that no dividend is due on either the common or preferred St. Paul stock until next March, and the Directors have no apparent intention of committing themselves, especially to an unpleasant decision, four months in advance. Almost any kind of story, however, can secure a hearing in the financial district these days, if it is only pessimistic enough.

Standardization and Production.

A great deal has been heard lately about the unwisdom of standardizing our thousands of new airplanes, on the theory that standardization, by committing the aviation service too deeply to certain types, hampers progressive development in machines, and in the continual and very rapid advance in plane construction, might leave our aviators equipped with obsolete machines. As to this an official of one of the largest American airplane manufacturing companies said yesterday: "The only trouble with this is that you have to standardize to secure quantity production. The Germans have kept ahead in the air, with inferior resources, by standardizing each new machine and producing it in quantity, and then bringing out an improved machine and standardizing all over again in that. They haven't fiddled around, and they haven't been afraid to scrap obsolete planes or ideas. As for us, the best comment is that since June, when the Government dropped giving orders with specifications, each item of which was subject to change without notice, and let us go ahead, our production has increased almost exactly fivefold, with identically the same plant."

Motor Earnings Again.

Dow, Jones & Co., publishers of The Wall Street Journal and proprietors of a financial news service, yesterday announced that A. R. Erskine, President of the Studebaker Corporation, had repudiated an interview which they had published on Saturday and attributed to him, giving a highly optimistic view of the earnings and prospects of the Studebaker business. The interview was dated Jacksonville, Fla., but Mr. Erskine, Dow, Jones & Co. announce, was reached yesterday at South Bend, Ind., and explained that he had been there for some days, and had not been in Jacksonville. Dow, Jones & Co. explained that the telegram from Jacksonville had come to them over the Western Union wires, signed "A. R. Erskine," and that they had no reason to doubt that it was bona fide. An investigation, through the Western Union, has been set on foot. The alleged statement by Mr. Erskine estimated the net earnings of the Studebaker Corporation for this year at $8,000,000, or at least $5,000,000 after deducting war taxes, and declared that the immediate liquidating value of the stock was double the present market price. Mr. Erskine actually stated yesterday, it is announced, that for the nine months ended Sept. 30 the corporation had earned $4,132,000.

RESERVE RULE AIDS TRADE ACCEPTANCES

L. E. PIERSON FAVORS PLAN

Many Corporations Are Now Expected to Turn Their Attention to Acceptance System.

The statement of the Federal Reserve Board declaring that renewable 90-day notes of the character recently issued by the B. F. Goodrich Company and the American Tobacco Company are "undesirable as investments for Federal Reserve Banks," which is taken to mean that they are ineligible for rediscount, has been made public at the psychological moment as far as the movement for the introduction of trade acceptances is concerned. The campaign of education that has been carried on by the National Association of Credit Men, and more recently by the American Trade Acceptance Council, is designed to impress upon the business community the advantages of the trade acceptance system. Now that the proposed plan of financing corporations by an extensive use of the rediscount facilities of the Federal Reserve System has been stopped by the Reserve Board, which holds that notes which are renewed for a period of two years lack the self-liquidating character of eligible paper, it is expected that many corporations will turn to the acceptance system.

Lewis E. Pierson, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Irving National Bank, speaking as the Chairman of the American Trade Acceptance Council, said:

"Of course, we all appreciate the fact that the activities of the war, naturally, have seriously increased the financing problem with which large corporations are confronted. We realize too that in an emergency of this kind, these corporations naturally would look hopefully toward possibilities of assistance from the Federal Reserve System.

"It would seem, however, that the best possibilities of this system toward extending financial assistance to the commerce of the country is to be found in the general use of the trade acceptance. It would seem too that this is an excellent time to call the attention of these corporations to the merit of the acceptance method of handling credit obligations, and the desirability of getting their accounts receivable, and accounts payable as well, upon an acceptance basis as soon as possible.

"It hardly would be expected that the Federal Reserve Board would favor a plan which in effect caused them to exercise greater liberality toward rediscount than is provided for in their trade acceptance plan. Nor would it be reasonable to suppose that the board would favor a new plan which proposed to cover a situation already so satisfactorily covered by the trade acceptance method, for which the board itself is directly responsible and upon which it has expended so much time and effort, and which, at present, it is endeavoring by every reasonable means to have introduced generally throughout the business of the country. It is believed that the trade acceptance is the best existing or possible method for the treatment of credit obligations arising from the sale of merchandise.

"If these corporations desire to secure the highest efficiency in financing their requirements, and to secure the greatest possible measure of co-operation from the Government, they will carry their receivables in trade acceptance form and give acceptances freely to cover their own obligations. In this way they will secure the financial advantage of economy in operations and of the best preferential rediscount rate in existence, and also will secure the benefit of the maximum of liberality toward private commercial necessities which the Government had contemplated in the creation of its Federal Reserve System."

The American Trade Acceptance Council will hold a two-day session at the Irving Bank Nov. 22 and 23, to consider ways and means to promote the use of the trade acceptance generally in mercantile and other transactions. On the evening of Nov. 22 the New York Credit Men's Association, in conjunction with the American Trade Acceptance Council, will hold a meeting at the Hotel Astor for the discussion of the elimination of the present open book account system in favor of the more liquid trade acceptance.

OPPOSE CITY BOND ISSUES.

Bankers Also Urge States to Restrict Wartime Expenditures.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 12.—The Investment Bankers' Association, which opened its convention here today, has decided to frown on every unnecessary issue of securities while war financing impends.

The decision came after an address on the conservation of capital by James F. Curtis, Secretary of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York. Mr. Curtis set forth the necessity of cutting off all securities not absolutely vital to the progress of the war, especially State and municipal issues.

"The invitation which Mr. Curtis has given is one to join the 'Suicide Club,'" said Lewis B. Franklin of New York, President of the association, "but, as he has aptly said, there are about about a million and a quarter men in khaki who have joined the 'Suicide Club' for us. They are doing it with their life blood; we are only considering the profit."

The tenor of the discussion which followed was that the members should forget the word 'house' now, as they did in the Liberty Loan campaigns, and agree on unselfish co-operation in the interest of war financing. The association will probably make a direct appeal to the Governor of every State to issue a proclamation calling on financial boards of States and cities to withhold all bond issues which can be dispensed with at this time.

A warning was issued against sharpers who, it was said, are likely to become active when those owning Liberty bonds of small denominations pay for them and do not know their value or what to do with them. These men, it was said, would be ready with "wildcat" issues, and the small investor must be protected against them.

THE COTTON MARKET

Much Better Feeling Prevails, with Prices Advancing 34 to 43 Points.

With no great increase in the volume of trading, the local cotton market showed a very much better feeling yesterday. For the first time in a considerable interval an advance on Liverpool met with a prompt response here. The early rise served to render some of the shorts nervous, and a bullish private crop estimate, in which a number of big traders appeared to put considerable confidence, coming in at the proper moment, helped matters along. The war situation over Sunday also looked more hopeful to traders, and the result of all these factors was a very steady and sustained advance, with only a slight reaction toward the close, which was steady at a net advance of from 34 to 43 points, January, still the most active month, leading. This month sold up to 27.40, not far below the season's high record, and closed at 27.23. Other months did not advance so rapidly, but reacted even less.

The private estimate mentioned places the crop at 10,738,000 bales, excluding linters. Before it was published, however, the market had opened strong, most of the active months from 22 to 25 points up at the call, following Liverpool and bullish spot advices. The better tone in the stock market also had its effect, and some trade buying in the near months was noted. The realizing of the late afternoon was comparatively slight, and the close found prices almost stationary.

The ocean freight space scarcity is apparently still a dominant factor in the Liverpool market, but its effect in this country apparently is more in the way of holding back the crop movement from the interior than in depressing prices, judging by Southern spot markets. It was also reported by some followers of the market that foreign consumers are meeting the present strain on transatlantic tonnage by buying cotton here and storing it on this side until freight rates are easier, with a consequent strong supporting influence on the market. Exports yesterday were 9,034 bales, making 1,377,106 bales so far this season. Southern spot markets were unchanged to 50 points higher, Houston leading on a day of considerable trading.

COMMODITIES MARKETS

WHEAT.

The visible supply of domestic and Canadian wheat in the United States increased 2,722,000 bushels during the past week, and the total is now 17,630,000 bushels, compared with 58,811,000 a year ago. Receipts at primary points yesterday were larger than a week ago, and the movement is gradually drawing up to last year. Crop advices from India and Argentina were more favorable, and Australia has a good surplus, with the Government building additional storage capacity in order that the grain may be better housed than last year.

RYE.—Market firm; No. 2 Western, 1.86½, cost, insurance, and freight, New York.

CORN.

Shorts in the corn market covered very freely on Monday, and prices were firmer, closing 1¼@2¼c net higher. The trade of late has been inclined to favor the bear side on the supposition that the increased offers of new low-grade corn were going to bring about lower prices, and apparently the market was heavily oversold. So far there has been no accumulation as a result of the movement of new corn, and the visible supply in the United States decreased 467,000 bushels for the week, bringing the total to 810,000 bushels, compared with 1,289,000 a year ago. In the local cash market, new yellow corn was quoted at $1.57¾, cost and freight, New York, to arrive.

PROVISIONS.

A decline of 5 to 10 points in the hog market and predictions of larger receipts in the near future caused an early decline in the provision list. Subsequently, however, the market turned firm on the strength in grain and a good cash demand. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 27,000, estimated for Tuesday, 34,000; Kansas City received 7,000 and Omaha 4,100.

COFFEE.

A steady opening was followed by reactions in the coffee market yesterday, with the close showing a net loss of 3@10 points. Brokers who are sometimes credited with operating for foreign interests were buyers early, and the active months sold a point or two above Saturday's closing figures. The demand was soon supplied, however. In spite of a reported advance of 25 cents a bag in the official quotation for ocean freight room from Brazil, and the market eased off under scattering liquidation. December was exchanged for March at 25 points, and for September at 71@74 points. The local spot markets remained steady on the basis of 7¾c for Rio 7s and 9¼c for Santos 4s. Range of prices:

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts yesterday, 5,514 packages. Some houses report fair demand for top grades of fine fresh creamery and a steady holding, but the general report is of a shade easier feeling, with a little more pressure to sell. Most of the Exchange sales on the basis of 44½c for creamery extras, and the larger part of the business very store, was on the same basis. Undergrades sold easier. Held creamery slightly lower. Papermakers' Trial Postponed.

Trial of the seven men who are under indictment charged with having combined to increase the price of news print paper, which was set for yesterday in the Federal District Court, went over until Thursday. After a jury is obtained another adjournment will be taken for a week or ten days. Counsel representing the defendants suggested yesterday that the delay was partly due to the hope that arrangements will be made between Government officials at Washington and the news print manufacturers that will result in the dismissal of the indictment.

UNITED STATES GOVT. BONDS

Inasmuch as the bulk of the business in United States Government bonds is done over the counter, and not on the Stock Exchange, The Times gives the following quotations, obtained from bond dealers:

NEW YORK CITY BONDS

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

On the Consolidated Stock Exchange stocks opened higher and sold steadily upward until just before noon when a reaction set in which carried prices down to about the opening figures. There were no indications of broad-scale selling. The activity at the opening followed the appearance of the over-Sunday accumulation of buying orders placed with commission houses. Traders felt somewhat better disposed toward the situation, and the buyers bid the market up in search of stock. When the demand finally was satisfied, the market turned dull, but the reaction was gradual until just at the close, when business reached a volume that about equaled the opening trading.

6,000 WAR WORKERS STRIKE AT NEWARK

THREATEN GREAT WALKOUT

Fight Made to Force Lackawanna Bridge Company to Recognize the Union—Federal Mediation Fails.

Six thousand workmen building shipyards, supply depots, and storage warehouses at Newark for the United States Government went on strike yesterday and may be joined by four thousand more tomorrow and many thousand additional before the week is out. The grievances of the men are against only one concern—the Lackawanna Bridge Company—and that company employs no union men.

To force this company to recognize the union the business agents of the Building Trades Council called the strike of all men affiliated with the building trades on Government work in the vicinity of Newark. By this action the unions hope to compel the intervention of the Government. They maintain the agreement regarding war work signed by the United States and the American Federation of Labor at the beginning of the war provided that local conditions and prevailing wages would govern all Government work. Newark, they declare, is closed shop territory and union wages prevail.

John Johnson, Vice President of the Ironworkers' International Union, said yesterday that union men are not hired by the Lackawanna Bridge Company at the shipyards they are building for the Emergency Fleet Corporation at Port Newark Terminal. "If we apply for work," Mr. Johnson said, "we are told to leave our names and we will be notified. Non-union men are put to work at once. Of the 1,100 men now working at the shipyards very few are union men. The men who are doing the work are used for all kinds of work; one day they are carpenters and another day laborers. They are not being paid the wages that prevail in this vicinity."

In another month the Lackawanna Bridge Company plans to have 3,000 men at work in the Port Newark Shipyard. McArthur Brothers are arranging to employ 12,000 men within three months. All this work will be at a standstill if no settlement is reached.

2 OF OUR MEN DIE ABROAD.

One a Victim of Pneumonia—Fall from Hammock Kills a Sailor.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—Two deaths in the fighting forces, not suffered, however, on the battle line, were reported today.

Seaman Andrew M. Halseth of the transport service, died Nov. 5 from concussion of the brain suffered in a fall from a hammock. He was a naval volunteer from Minnesota.

Private Emile B. Galliac of General Pershing's forces, died Nov. 3 from broncho-pneumonia. His mother, Cora F. Galliac, lives at 113 Blossom Street, Chelsea, Mass.

CLOSE JERSEY PLANT FOR LACK OF CORN

Appeal Made to Hoover on Behalf of Public and 700 Employes.

The Corn Products Refining Company's plant at Edgewater, N. J., has been closed, it was announced yesterday, due to the inability of the company to get sufficient corn to operate. Seven hundred men are out of employment. The President of the company, E. T. Bedford, has sent this telegram to National Food Administrator Hoover:

On Friday S. F. Evans wired you were anxious to obtain for us 200,000 bushels of corn stored in the Baltimore & Ohio elevator and thought that you had done so, but that this purchase was being delayed, possibly prevented, for the reason that the latter department was wrangling over formalities. For want of corn we have been obliged to close down our large seaboard plant, capable of grinding 35,000 bushels daily, putting 700 men out of employment and depriving the consuming public of products so greatly needed, which conserve the consumption of wheat and sugar as no others can.

The officials of the Food and Fuel Administration are entirely optimistic. Albert H. Wiggin, State Fuel Administrator, said that while there was not so great a supply of coal in the hands of the public as there was this time last year, the situation was not serious. At the same time the American Refiners Committee announced that it was supervising the distribution of 6,000 tons of sugar.

FREIGHT CARS IN WAR WORK.

Railroads' War Board Directs Movement All Over the Country.

The Railroads' War Board yesterday announced that during the past week it had sent 1,500 flat cars to the South to carry piling and heavy lumber for the new shipyards, and had ordered 3,000 box-cars to be sent West to protect Government orders for grain and hay, while consignments of refrigerator cars have been sent to Colorado, Idaho, North Dakota, and Minnesota to handle the apple and potato crops, which must be stored or moved to prevent heavy loss. The Commission on Car Service is taking steps to economize refrigerator cars and use box-cars wherever possible to save the perishable crops.

The Pennsylvania Railroad announced that under its "Shipping Day" plan for moving freight in less than carload lots, it has been able to transport such freight about three times as fast as formerly, and to save nearly 100 cars a day out of Philadelphia.

Colonel Samuel P. Colt, President of the United States Rubber Company, declared that not more than 10 per cent. of all rubber tires sold in this country were for use on expensive pleasure cars, and that a much larger proportion of the country's total automobiles than is generally believed are now actually at work helping in the transportation problem.

7. Credit Check on Collateral

Take the case of the Collateral back of our Collateral Trust Gold Debentures. Every dealer who sells Passenger cars on time is required to furnish annually and often more frequently a detailed financial statement.

On the basis of this and data obtained from every other possible source, such as banks, mercantile agencies, trade authorities, special reporting bureaus, etc., conservative bank credit limits are established for each manufacturer, each distributor and each dealer. These credit limits are rechecked periodically with new data as obtained in the regular revisions of the credit files.

Purchasers of cars are required to give definite data concerning their ability to pay. This information is checked against reports from disinterested sources to show that purchasers are entitled to credit. If the credit of both the purchaser and the dealer are approved and if the outstanding contingent liability of the dealer plus the notes offered do not exceed the dealer's credit limit, the notes are passed. Of course each note bought bears the dealer's endorsement.

The credit check on collateral underlying our Collateral Trust Commercial Vehicle Debentures is identical. In the case of the Collateral Trust Notes, resulting from the sale of Passenger automobiles and Trucks at wholesale, the credit check on the drawer, whether this be the manufacturer or the distributor is as exhaustive as in the case of the dealer who sells cars at retail. In addition the acceptor is investigated thoroughly, and no acceptances are taken unless the acceptor seems good for the amount involved independent of the drawer.

Even the largest acceptance buying banks in this and foreign countries do not even try to check both names on an acceptance in the thorough manner in which the Guaranty Securities Corporation organization does. They depend practically in all cases upon only one of the names, and seldom have any information at all about the other.

The extremely low percentage of credit losses suffered by the Corporation is but one of the proofs of the conservatism and vigilance of its credit organization. On $39,873,783.63, of paper purchased during the two years up to August 31, 1917, losses and paper of doubtful collectability have amounted to only $29,516.05.

May we send you our new booklet, "Collateral Trust Securities," which discusses this feature in more detail and many other features, such as the following:

Self Liquidation; Maturities;
Margin of Security; 10,000 Name Paper;
Insurance Protection;
Collection Record of Underlying Collateral;
Vocational Diversification of Underlying Names;
Geographical Distribution of Underlying Names;
Should Automobiles Be Sold On Credit.

Upholstery and Tapestry.

The season thus far in upholstery and tapestry is said to have kept up in volume with the high record of last year. According to reports, plain and figured velvets have been the best sellers. Mohair plushes and other pile fabrics have also been good. In colors the familiar red and green shades of former years have been more or less neglected, it is said, for blue, gray, mulberry, beaver, and havane. As a whole, a much better grade of merchandise has been sold this year than last. Striped hangings have become very popular in attractive color combinations matching the flower designs in upholstery.

All Waist Shades Sell.

The popularity of the darker suit shades in women's waists which has been so pronounced for some time, is not, however, causing the neglect of the lighter shades. White, various shades of pink, flesh color, and orange are very much in favor according to reports from the trade, and sales records are thus constantly growing larger. The fine lingerie waist which has been somewhat neglected for a time, also is said to be coming back into the limelight.

Wide Appeal of Motor Coats.

Automobile coats for women in mixed tweeds and other fabrics have been one of the best items in the Fall trade, according to local manufacturers. They are said to be coming into general use for walking and out-of-town wear as well as for motoring. Coats which have been treated to various waterproofing processes seem to be among the favorites in these lines. In styles, the loose, flowing lines with the belted effect prevail. Modified military trimmings, such as the large army color, cartridge decorations on the lapels, and buttons with crossed guns are quite popular.

Smith Company Makes Prices.

Prices on the Spring lines of carpets and rugs of the Alexander Smith & Sons Carpet Company were made here yesterday. Those on merchandise to be made up showed advances of about 10 per cent. over the quotations which prevailed on April 23 last, while those for goods already in stock remained the same as the April figures. A considerable quantity of rugs and carpets also was offered at special prices, which averaged about 7½ per cent. below the quotations on stock goods. All orders were taken with the understanding that prices are subject to change without notice, and that they are accepted subject to war conditions and the ability of the company to deliver stock goods by Dec. 31 and new goods by April 1 next. The attendance at the opening was large, with the best buying apparently being done on the "jobs" and the cheaper lines of stock goods.

Prices Firm on Gray Goods.

Prices continued firm on gray goods in the local market yesterday, but that fact did not deter buyers from covering themselves further on goods wanted for delivery through the rest of this year and the first quarter of next. There was a large demand for 30 and 37 inch drills which, though sellers were not willing to go into details about, were said to have sold at substantial figures. Among the sheeting sales were four-yard, 48 squares, at 13 cents, and 40-inch 4.25-yard goods at the same price. There was no marked feature to business in printcloths, though sales were made for this year on 38½-inch 60-48s at 9⅝ cents, and on 64-60s in the same width, for early 1918 shipment, at 10⅞ cents. Sateens and twills continued to sell in a large way. Printcloth prices closed at these levels:

39-inch, 80-80s..	*15¼c	38½-inch, 64-60s..	11c
39-inch, 72-76s..	*14¼c	38½-inch, 65-56s..	10⅜c
39-inch, 68-72s...	12¼c	38½-inch, 60-52s..	9¾c
39-inch, 56-44s...	8¾c	38½-inch, 60-48s..	9⅝c

Increase Helped Collar Sales.

Now that sufficient time has elapsed to get a line on the effect which the recent increase in collar prices has had on business, well-known manufacturers here report that it was generally stimulating. The saving represented to the consumer when three or more collars were bought at one time has encouraged most men to purchase in quantities. This incentive was lacking on the old retail price of 15 cents "straight." Advance sales of collars for Spring have been very large, and little difficulty in obtaining deliveries of the fabrics required to make them is anticipated by the big concerns. Soft collars have sold in a large way, but with some houses, even under these circumstances, they cut rather a small figure when compared with the amount of business done in starched ones. One thing about soft collars, however, is that they have now reached the staple stage and are selling more or less freely all through the year.

Cheap Suits Neglected.

Women's suits of the better grades have been in fair demand during most of the Fall months, according to reports from a number of local manufacturers. But in the cheaper grades, while the first six or eight weeks were good, the last few weeks have seen a falling off in orders that materially pulls down the record for the season. The Middle West is said not to have felt this as much as have the Eastern markets, where there has been a more pronounced trend toward coats and dresses. The "coat-dress," too, has been instrumental in the slackened suit demand in New York City.

Says Sisal Cannot Replace Jute.

Contrary to what was recently said on the possibility of sisal fibre replacing jute in the manufacture of bags, a well-known member of the local burlap trade holds that it cannot be done in a way sufficiently large to make it commercially worth while. "Granting that there was enough sisal fibre raised to supply the normal demand for jute, which I doubt," he said, "where would the yarns be woven into cloth? Surely there are not mills enough in Yucatan for the purpose, if there are any at all. The mills in this country that could do this work are so few that only a very small part of this market's current needs could be supplied, as they average many million yards a month. Why, it would take five years to build mills enough in this country to replace the Calcutta burlaps that come here."

Burlap Trading Is Checked.

The abnormally high levels at which burlaps are now quoted in this market, as a result of the increased scarcity growing out of the active buying in the latter part of last week and the present paucity of afloat goods, has put a sharp check on business. The nominal quotation on 10½-ounce, 40-inch goods here yesterday was 21 cents, with 8-ounce goods of the same weight held nominally at 16. Ten and 7½-ounce 40s were quoted from 10 to 15 points lower. Late reports from the primary markets again told of an advancing tendency in prices, with the outlook for increased shipments dark. An unconfirmed report received here during the day told of the sinking of a burlap-laden Japanese steamer, bound for Seattle, off the Pacific Coast.

TO PUT DUTCH SHIPS IN OUR SERVICE SOON

Washington Understands War Trade Board Is Near an Agreement with Holland.

FIRM ON EMBARGO POLICY

Shipments to European Neutrals Will Be Allowed Only to Supply Their Immediate Needs.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—Reports were heard here today that the Dutch tonnage now tied up in New York harbor and other seaports by order of the War Trade Board may soon be put into service under an agreement between the board and the Holland Government. Official confirmation is lacking. It can be stated, however, that there is to be no weakening of the embargo policy which has forbidden shipments of foodstuffs and fodder to Holland or other northern neutral countries, while it might be used to give aid to Germany.

Shipments will be permitted to enter those countries only when the bottom of the grain bins are in sight and the cattle herds reduced to the point where, under the terms of any agreement which may be reached, aid to the enemy would mean actual suffering at home. Jan. 1 had been set as the earliest date when shipments might begin, and even then adverse reports from agents of this Government abroad would result in renewed restrictions.

It is understood that the War Trade Board has insisted that any of the Dutch vessels released must be chartered to American interests and subject to the new charter rates. One proposition which has been considered, according to an unofficial report, includes the use of one-third of the tonnage in the coastwise trade, one-third in transatlantic trade with the Allies, and one-third in trade between the United States and Holland, on condition that certain cargoes be transported to Belgium.

Thousands of head of cattle already have been killed in Holland, it is reported, because of the lack of fodder, caused by the American embargo, and undoubtedly large quantities of the meats have found their way into Germany. But this has been the logical result of the embargo policy and will supply only temporary aid to the Germans, instead of a steady flow of fats, which is the greatest need of the armies and civilian population of the Central Powers.

It is understood that the acceptance of American charter rates has been one of the points which has stood in the way of an agreement. It is probable that the cargoes now on board the Dutch ships will be unloaded and distributed for consumption in this country. Some of the vessels would be put into the trade with Argentina to bring cargoes of wheat to America. Through bunker coal arrangements, the movements of the vessels would be absolutely controlled.

It has been reported in some quarters that Holland feared the effect in Germany of a step which would put the major part of the 300,000 tons or more of shipping held up here into trade that would aid the United States and her Allies, and in that connection the most strenuous efforts were made by the Holland Commissioners to obtain favorable terms.

On the other hand, the owners of the vessels have been steadily losing money, and were made to realize that there would be no relenting on the part of the War Trade Board from its original position. The owners, it is said, were becoming restless, because of the heavy losses involved and the fact that there was no evidence that the United States would give way. A few of the vessels have been chartered to American interests and have slipped quietly out of the harbors, but up to the present time, at least, the status of most of the tonnage has remained the same as it was on July 15, when the embargo went into effect.

There has been no official announcement, and members of the War Trade Board have refrained from discussion of the negotiations which have been going on. Holland has held out as persistently up to this date at least as the American Government, while the cargoes were rotting in the holds of the ships.

The question of the legal right of the United States to seize the ships and cargoes even has come up, but the Government has held back from this action pending the hope of an agreement along the lines it has suggested, despite the increasing demand for tonnage.

Samson Loses Reinstatement Suit.

Leon Samson, the former student of the College of the City of New York who was dismissed for participating in a pacifist demonstration on the campus, following an address by Major Gen. Leonard Wood last Spring, yesterday lost his suit against the College Trustees to compel them to reinstate him. Justice Newburger, who heard the case, declined to go into the merits of the controversy because of a ruling that Samson's request for reinstatement must be made to the State Commissioner of Education.

COOKS Imperial Extra Dry Champagne

Seeing America First

has been a delightful revelation to many Americans who used to think that they could attain travel enjoyment only by means of an ocean liner.

Seeing the American label first has been just as pleasant a surprise to many who used to think that superior champagne could reach them only via an ocean freighter.

So, all 'round, America has come into her own, and hereafter, war or no war, people will see this American wine first.

EVIDENCE CONFLICTS IN STIASSNY CASE

Dooling Says It Still Is an Open Question Whether Woman Committed Suicide.

MAID INCLINED TO SILENCE

Lawyers Are Called Into Case Because of Probable Litigation in Probating the Will.

Assistant District Attorney John T. Dooling said yesterday that he was being hampered in his investigation of the death of Mrs. Sarah M. Stiassny, the wealthy woman, who was found dead in bed last Wednesday morning at 215 West Ninety-eighth Street, because all of the witnesses he had examined told him different stories.

"I have heard some of the strangest conflicts in testimony that I ever encountered," said Mr. Dooling. "If there was no mystery in the matter, a good deal has been created by the contradictory statements made. It is still an open question whether this was a suicide or not. I would not say that any one is under suspicion, but much has not been explained. The explanations I have had so far confuse the doubtful points more than ever.

"I have not been able to find out who took three shells out of the revolver with which the woman was killed before the police arrived, and why they were taken out. I don't understand why the nightrobe, burned by one of the bullets, was rolled into a bundle and placed behind a radiator in the parlor of the house.

"I can't understand why the explanation was made that Mrs. Stiassny committed suicide because she was worried over money matters when her financial affairs were in good order and she was in receipt of a large income. I don't understand why three witnesses who saw the body before it was moved all saw the revolver and the hand grasping it in an entirely different position. There are many other peculiar points about the case which I am not yet ready to discuss."

Dora Watts, the negro maid, who served coffee to Mrs. Stiassny a short time before she was found dead, promised yesterday morning to call at the District Attorney's office by 4 o'clock in the afternoon to answer questions regarding the quarrel which Mrs. Stiassny is said to have had the night before her death. The maid did not arrive at the District Attorney's office till nearly 6 o'clock. When she did come, she refused at first to answer any questions at all.

Answers Some Questions.

"Finally, she told me," said Mr. Dooling, "that she had been to the office of Attorney Max D. Steuer, who has been engaged in behalf of Isaac Epstein. I asked her how she had come to go to the lawyer's office, but she refused to answer. Later she answered a number of questions, but refused to tell who had advised her to consult the lawyer. In some other matters also she remained silent.

"One thing she told me was that it was she who had placed the nightdress on the radiator at the suggestion of a person in the apartment. She said that she did not know how it came to be rolled up and pushed to the bottom of the box, where it was found."

Mr. Steuer said yesterday that he had advised Dora Watts to tell the District Attorney all that she knew about the case. Mr. Steuer came to the District Attorney's office in company with Isaac Epstein. He said that efforts to picture the case as one of murder were ridiculous and that it was clearly a case of suicide.

Lawyers were called into the case yesterday because of probable litigation, when the will is offered for probate, even if no criminal charge is made. Mr. Steuer was engaged by Epstein, who received six pieces of improved real estate and 40 per cent. of the residuary estate under the will. The firm of Jerome, Rand & Kresel was engaged in behalf of Mrs. Jesse Lubetkin, a relative of the dead woman, to represent her interests in the estate.

The investigation into the circumstances of the woman's death was started after Mrs. Lubetkin had written a letter to the District Attorney's office asking for an inquiry.

Steuer Makes Statement.

"Several people of high standing called me up and asked me to represent Mr. Epstein," said Mr. Steuer yesterday. "They have known him ever since he came to this country and are in a position to vouch for him as a young man of excellent character. I never saw him before today and have not had the least chance to discuss the case with him, but I told him to come down here and answer every question that Mr. Dooling puts to him. I am willing to have him answer any question that can be put to him. Mr. Dooling has requested me not to allow my client to make any statement to the newspapers. He is making a proper investigation of the case, and I have promised him that Mr. Epstein should say nothing for the present."

When Mr. Dooling was asked about this, he said:

"I made no such request of Mr. Steuer. Whether Mr. Epstein might talk to reporters was not so much as mentioned between us. He may talk as much as he likes, as far as I am concerned."

One witness questioned by Mr. Dooling last night was Miss Cele Rubenstein of 200 West 100th Street, a friend of Epstein, who haad been summoned to the house on the morning the dead woman was found. She said the night before she had attended a theatre with Epstein and Mrs. Stiassny, and that she and Epstein had left the theatre early, Mrs. Stiassny remaining behind in her seat.

Another fruitless effort was made yesterday to discover who had removed two loaded shells and an empty one from the revolver after it had killed Mrs. Stiassny. Policeman Storey, who was the first to examine the revolver, according to the witnesses at the house, said that he examined the revolver first without opening it, and could see from the outside that there were only two cartridges, one loaded and one empty, in it. He said that he saw Policeman Tuckson open the revolver, and that no other shells had dropped out.

Another important point in the policeman's testimony was his statement that he found the woman's hand, clutching the revolver, lying on her chest. According to the statements to the District Attorney, no one touched the body before the policeman arrived, but Epstein, who discovered the body, said that the hand and revolver lay beside the head when he saw it. Dr. B. M. Feldman, who preceded the policeman, said that the hand and revolver lay extended beside the body.

Mr. Dooling said he had further evidence that the woman had had a violent quarrel late the night before her death. He placed in the hands of a handwriting expert the suicide note left by Mrs. Stiassny.

ORPHANS ATTEND MASS FOR J. D. CRIMMINS

Impressive Service in St. Patrick's Cathedral at the Funeral of Their Benefactor.

One of the most impressive services ever held in St. Patrick's Cathedral was the solemn high requiem mass sung yesterday for the late John D. Crimmins, contractor, prominent Catholic layman, and philanthropist. As the funeral cortège proceeded from the Crimmins home, 40 East Sixty-eighth Street, a dirge was sounded on the cathedral chimes and the bells of other Catholic churches in the city were tolled. Mr. Crimmins had been a parishioner of St. Patrick's since the present edifice was built.

Cardinal Farley occupied the Cathedral throne and Bishop Thomas J. Shahan, Rector of the Catholic University at Washington; Bishop Charles McDonnell of Brooklyn, and Mgr. M. J. Lavelle, Rector of St. Patrick's, with Mgrs. Flood, Ferrant, and Chidwick, occupied seats within the chancel rail. The pontifical master of ceremonies was Mgr. Thomas G. Carroll, and the Rt. Rev. Joseph F. Mooney the celebrant, assisted by the Rev. J. G. Spence, O. P. deacon; the Rev. D. J. O'Connor, and the Rev. Henry F. Hammer, master of ceremonies of the mass; fifty priests from churches in the archdiocese, and 100 acolytes. Perosi's "Requiem" mass was sung.

Relatives of Mr. Crimmins in the cathedral were: Mrs. Crimmins Jennings, John D. Crimmins, Jr., Miss Mary C. Crimmins, Lieut. Col. Martin L. Crimmins, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Crimmins, Mrs. Frederick E. Childs, Frederick R. Childs, Miss Mercedes Crimmins, Mr. and Mrs. Cyril Crimmins, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur C. Patterson, Mr. and Mrs. Morgan J. O'Brien, Gould Jennings, Jr., Martin Lalor Crimmins, Jr., John D. Crimminis, 3d, Mr. and Mrs. J. Henry Haggerty, Peter Lalor, Miss Julia Lalor, Martin Lalor, Mr. and Mrs. Walter A. Burke, and Mr. and Mrs. Richard Costello. The Cathedral was filled with friends of Mr. Crimmins, and several hundred orphan children from the Catholic Orphan Asylum, an institution in which Mr. Crimmins took a deep interest, filed into the church with bowed beads. The eulogy was pronounced by Mgr. Lavelle, who said in part:

"Mr. Crimmins was a distinguished character in whatever light one viewed him, as a contractor, a banker, a family man, a friend, a New Yorker, an American, an Irishman, and a Catholic. He maintained those lofty ideals which won for him the love and respect of his fellow men. At one time he had 30,000 men on his payroll, but there was never a strike. Mr. Crimmins was a member of many organizations, but his greatest treasure was the Catholic Church. For thirty years it was a source of joy for him to visit the institution conducted by the Little Sister of the Poor on Christmas and help serve the dinner that he had provided out of his store of worldly possessions."

At the conclusion of the mass the coffin was conveyed to Corpus Christi Monastery, Lafayette Avenue and Hunts Point Road, the Bronx, where it was laid in the crypt beside that of Mrs. Crimmins. The honorary pallbearers, all Knights of St. Gregory, were John P. O'Rourke, Dr. Edward L. Keyes, Jr., George W. Loft, James Butler, Michael J. Mulqueen, John G. Agar, W. Bourke Cochran, Clarence H. Mackay, Victor J. Dowling, Myles Tierney, Dr. James J. Walsh, Dr. Thomas Addis Emmet, Eugene A. Philbin, Adrian Iselin, Jr., Dr. Francis J. Quinlan, Dr. Thomas F. McParlan, Bernard Coleman, Edmond G. Hurley, John B. Manning, and Henry Heide.

Museum Honors Roosevelt.

Colonel Theodore Roosevelt was elected Honorary Fellow at a meeting of the Trustees of the American Museum of Natural History yesterday. This was in recognition of his work as a field naturalist and his service in the cause of science. Many of the important specimens in the museum were collected and contributed by Colonel Roosevelt. His father organized the group of citizens who founded the museum.

WILSON SENDS ARMY HIS "GREATEST WISH"

Tells Pershing's Men Through Gov. Beeckman That He Longs to be with Them.

LONDON, Nov. 12.—Governor R. L. Beeckman of Rhode Island arrived in London today on his way to France, where he will deliver a personal message from President Wilson to the American troops and the greetings of the people of the New England States to their sons in the United States Army contingent. Before leaving the United States, Mr. Beeckman saw President Wilson, whose parting words were:

"Tell our boys my greatest wish is that I might be with them."

The Governor, who is accompanied by Mrs. Beeckman, said to The Associated Press today:

"We plan to fly from London to Paris. Just when and where we will start cannot be divulged owing to military requirements. I will fly in one machine and Mrs. Beeckman in another. We will start at the same time and expect to be in Paris about four hours later. Mrs. Beeckman is an experienced flier, having been up seven times in the United States. I have never flown.

"My reason for the proposed flight is simply that I want to face some dangers, when our brave boys in France are facing so many. I reasoned that they daily are taking much greater risks, and I thought that nothing would hearten them more than the knowledge that one of their Governors took a sportsman's chance to bring the greetings from President Wilson and the people of New England."

The Governor said that on his arrival here the War Office placed two automobiles at his disposal, but that he declined to use them on the ground that petrol ought to be used only for necessary war purposes.

ARREST SCOTT NEARING ON SEDITION CHARGE

Police at Duluth Act After Hearing Speech at People's Council Meeting.

DULUTH, Minn., Nov. 12.—Professor Scott Nearing of Toledo, President and Chairman of the Executive Committee of the People's Council of America for Democracq and Terms of Peace, was arrested tonight while attempting to hold a secret session of the council in a suburban hall here. While the nominal charge of vagrancy is filed against Nearing, he is held without bail. He will be turned over to the Federal authorities tomorrow.

Four others were arrested also in the raid of sixty policemen on the meeting. Nearing and two of his companions were charged by the police with making seditious remarks concerning the prosecution of the war of the United States on Germany.

Four hours before the meeting was scheduled to start John Kenny, Department of Justice representative here, was informed that invitation cards were being distributed bearing Nearing's name which would entitle the holder to admission into the hall. These cards were given out only to persons supposed to be opposed to the war.

The police were notified by Kenny and invitation cards were obtained for a stenographer. The shorthand reporter took a seat at the back of the hall and is said to have secured a full report of all the speeches.

Nearing's attempt to hold the meeting was in defiance of the State Public Safety Commission of Minnesota, which recently brought him into prominence by an order barring the People's Council from holding its convention in Minneapolis or elsewhere in the State. The council, it will be recalled, later convened in Chicago.

LANSING FRAMES PLAN TO FINANCE NICARAGUA

Proposes Supervision of Revenues by Commission Controlled by Americans.

MANAGUA, Nov. 12.—The plan of Secretary of State Lansing with regard to the administration of Nicaragua's national revenues has been received here. It provides for the payment of the country's external debt, the disposition of the internal revenue, and the appointment of an international commission, to be formed by two Americans and one Nicaraguan.

Under the plan the Nicaraguan Government will be allowed $80,000 a month for expenses. The National Bank, an American institution, will receive the internal revenue and pay the salaries of Government employes. A fiscal agent, who will be an American, will be responsible only to the International High Commission.

Nicaragua must approve or disapprove the plan by Nov. 15.

For a long time the finances of Nicaragua have been involved. In 1916 the American Government took over the management of the internal revenues of the country, in an endeavor to rehabilitate the financial situation.

A dispatch from Managua last May said it was reported that a disagreement had arisen between the Nicaraguan Government and the American Collector of Customs, and that the Managua Government had insisted on Washington paying money due for the canal concession, or otherwise Nicaragua would be compelled to take over the customs, owing to the pressing financial situation.

ACT MENACES COAL OUTPUT.

New Explosives Law May Stop Blasting by Foreign Miners.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—The coal mines of the country may be seriously crippled if the explosives act is literally carried out forbidding the issue of licenses to use dynamite and powder to enemies and "those unfriendly to the United States." Van H. Manning, in charge of the enforcement of the law, today conferred with Henry A. Garfield, Fuel Commissioner, as to how the law should be interpreted and whether Austro-Hungarians, Turks, and Bulgarians were to be classed as enemies or persons unfriendly to this Government. If so, 20 to 25 per cent. of the miners in Central Pennsylvania will not be allowed to have explosives used for blasting in the mines.

Side view—clean style lines, but visibly comfortable.

A firm support, a graceful arch.

As you look down on them—the shape of the last reveals some of the secret of "Solace" comfort.

The "Solace"

THE "SOLACE" Walk-Over Shoe for women is exactly what its name implies. A shoe so full of comfort that a woman who wears them scarcely knows she has on a shoe at all.

Made for the woman who is active—is on her feet a good part of the day. For the woman who demands absolute shoe comfort combined with good shoe looks.

Constructed—so that if troubled with a bunion or enlarged joint anywhere in the foot—it hides the imperfection, at the same time giving comfort that's longed for. (See sketches.)

A wonderful shoe for walking or working. Thousands are sold to New York women every year who are most sensible in selecting shoes.

The "Solace" is a high shoe—laced, not a high heel—made of the most pliable and softest leather—black Glace Kid.

Also made in White Canvas—it has proved very popular with trained nurses, who come pretty near knowing by experience what's right in a shoe.

Sells at $6. in all Walk-Over Stores, and worth every penny of it in comfort and wear. Try the "Solace" if you are wearing shoes that don't give your feet a fair chance.
